Hostile Congress

By Charles Molony
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paul V. McNutt's future as War Manpower commissioner was imperiled yesterday as the House Appropriations Committee refused his request for $2,454,000 which he had proclaimed essential for his agency to discharge its duties.

The turndown, coming while McNutt was under fire in some congressional quarters, virtually challenged him to battle for continuance in the post he has held for 10 months.

McNutt has declared his organization needs strengthening to perform difficult tasks just ahead. One of these deals with the transfer of workers from jobs classed as nonessential to war work. He has decreed that by April 1:

1. Men in work called "nondeferable" must have registered for war jobs, or, regardless of dependent wives and children, risk speedy induction into the armed forces if they are of draft age and physically fit.

2. Employers in 32 areas of "critical labor shortage" must gear operations to a 48-hour minimum work week so they can get along with fewer workers and release some of their employes for war jobs.

Under Heavy Pressure

Because he grounded these orders on the necessity for providing manpower to meet the labor needs of war industry, McNutt will be under tremendous pressure to place in war jobs all those displaced from their old jobs as a result of his orders.

The turndown he received from the House committee means that, unless he can win a reversal, he must face this problem with his job-placement unit, the United States Employment Service, in what he considers doubtful shape to handle the task.

The committee refused to give the USES any of the $2,454,000 McNutt had told it he must have to lift salaries of its personnel to the Federal wage scale through next June, and stop a wave of job-quitting which, his aides said, has sapped the unit's morale.

McNutt Fixes Blame

It is the third time McNutt has been rebuffed by Congress in a request of this kind, and it came in the face of a hint McNutt gave the committee that he would blame Congress if the USES failed in its job.

"If we are crippled and do not meet the problem, then I will feel it incumbent upon me at least to say where I think the reason is—one of the reasons," he said.

Committeeman Taber (Republican) of New York replied that "there are better ways of presenting the matter than by what seems to me to be a threat."

Involved in McNutt's struggle for "pay adjustment" for the USES is a long-standing controversy over State and Federal powers.

The unit was set up originally with the States in principal control of the offices within their bounds and the pay of USES employes in each State tied to the level of State employe pay, which in most instances is below the Federal level.

After Pearl Harbor, the Federal Government took control of the agency's operations, but the pay scales were kept at the State levels by Congress on the contention that the offices were just being "loaned" to the Federal Government for the duration.

Narcotic Bureau Agents Arrest Md. Physician

Dr. John E. Bowers, 65, Brandywine, Md., was arrested yesterday by Narcotic Bureau agents on charges of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act and selling morphine, by means of prescriptions to addicts.

The warrant for his arrest was issued by United States Commissioner James K. Cullen of Baltimore following a conference with Assistant District Attorney Barton T. Harrington of Baltimore and Narcotic Bureau agents.

The arrest was a continuation of the drive to halt the illicit traffic in narcotics by physicians in the Washington area. Three prominent Washington physicians were arrested January 25. The arresting officers were Boyd M. Martin, District supervisor of the Narcotics Bureau, and Leroy W. Morrison, agent in charge of the District.

'Ghost' Board Operates To Ease Legislators' Coupon Woes

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The "bulk" of the members of both houses of Congress have cleared their gasoline and tire ration applications through a mysteriously operated section of a District War Price and Ration Board since last summer, it was learned last night.

These special facilities set up for the convenience of Congressmen promise "twenty-four hour service" on Congressional requests for extra gasoline and make it unnecessary for the Nation's legislators to clear their applications through their local ration boards like other citizens.

Quarters In Force School

According to officials familiar with the operation of the special section known as "Congressional Service," relations with the legislators have been very amicable, with officials unable to recall any occasion where a Congressman's request for gasoline was turned down.

The special section has headquarters at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue—in the Force School—and operates as a part of the ration board which handles rations for District taxis and trucks.

No tangible evidence of the existence of this phantom section of the OPA has ever been given to the public as far as could be determined last night.

No public announcement was ever made of the existence of the section, and even today after months of operation, it is without separate listing in the telephone directory. One official explained that the sergeants-at-arms of the House and Senate were simply asked to "pass the word along" to the members.

On Same Basis

OPA officials offered assurance that congressional rations were handled on the same basis as the rations of other citizens with no favoritism. They estimated that only a "minority" of members had received C rations—the equivalent to unlimited rations.

R. K. Thompson, newly appointed director of the District OPA, refused to comment on the propriety of the special board, but said that he planned to look into the matter in the course of his present survey of the activities of all District boards.

Shrouded in Mystery

Thompson stated that the special section was authorized to handle the rations of Congressmen—not their employes or other Government officials. However, there is knowledge of at least one case

Labor Secretary Fails to Get Fund To Fight Absenteeism

Secretary of Labor Perkins, after going through a heated lecture before a House Appropriations subcommittee, yesterday lost out in a bid for $337,000 with which to combat absenteeism in war plants.

Miss Perkins suggested that many of the causes of absenteeism were simple and could be simply cured through the correct advice. "In many places," she said, "drinking fountains scattered through the plants where people work, has been one of the ways by which absenteeism has been reduced and eliminated." Other improvements, she said, could be made in industrial and fire hazard conditions, in lighting and ventilation, and in the arrangement of shifts.

Johnson Protests

But she ran into this barrage from Representative Johnson (Democrat) of Oklahoma:

"The fact is, Madame Secretary, there are thousands of good citizens, many of whom have boys in active service in the armed forces, who are deeply disturbed about this shocking situation of absenteeism in the various industries.

"There is also a deep-seated feeling that you, Madame Secretary, are not very much disturbed or even concerned about it. That's the point I'm trying to drive home."

Johnson added that "unless this absentee and strike racket stops in these war industries, Congress is going to do something about it whether you can or not." Then he demanded to know the secretary's "attitude toward strikes."

Secretary Replies

Miss Perkins replied:

"I am sorry if anybody imagines that I have encouraged strikes at any time, either in wartime or at any other time, but particularly in a wartime like this. If all of my public utterances and public writings are examined, you will find they have invariably pointed out that that sort of thing is a situation that cannot be tolerated, particularly in wartime, and that methods must be developed to prevent strikes.

"We have spent a very large part of our time and effort in trying to find ways in which to prevent strikes, or if any strike occurred, to shorten the length of time it lasted and to get men back to their jobs promptly."

New Deal Projects Cut

House Group Recommends 6 Billion More for War Needs

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A recommendation for more than six new billions in war funds, mostly to build shipping, was sent to the House yesterday by its Appropriations Committee in a report which also announced that money had been denied these Administration projects:

1. War Manpower Commissioner McNutt's request for $2,454,000 to solve a manpower problem in his own agency—rapid turnover in the United States Employment Service resulting from salaries termed lower than Federal standards.

2. Secretary of Labor Perkins' request for $337,000 to help curb absenteeism and improve working conditions in war factories.

3. The proposal of Charles P. Taft, chief of Defense Health and Welfare Services, to use $2,973,000 a Federal funds to finance a program for taking care of children of employed mothers in the States and the District—a plan which was drawn up as part of McNutt's program to get women into war jobs.

4. A request for $3,182,000 from the Office of Education to pay for training high school students for wartime service through the High School Victory Corps—another project established by the War Manpower Commission.

5. A fund of $1,200,000 for use by the Children's Bureau in the Labor Department to provide, through the States, emergency maternity and infant care to wives and children of enlisted men.

6. An extra $200,000 for the National Resources Planning Board, headed by Frederic A. Delano, the President's uncle—"deferred" until Congress decides finally whether the agency is to continue next year. The House has already voted down its money for next year.

Also deferred, but with promise of continued study, was a request for $65,075,000 for an Agriculture Department program to recruit and distribute farm labor. This request came a few days ago, the report pointed out, and funds are expected to be recommended shortly.

Rejected entirely were two requests totaling $787,700 for Bureau of Labor Statistics surveys, the larger one wanted by Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes to provide information for the cost-of-living control program.

In approving the deficiency total of $6,298,530,435.87, Chairman Cannon of the Appropriations Committee pointed out that the group had trimmed a total of $13,906,330 from the amounts recommended by the budget.

This left four billion in cash and $2,173,719,545 in contract authorizations for the Maritime Commission to help pay for about half of the 4403-ship program to be largely finished by the end of 1944.

In addition, the committee approved $124,810,890.87 for other agencies, all out of a tiny frac-

Deferment Probe Opens in Agencies

7 Vegetables Now Pegged

60-Day Ceilings Set on Spinach, Lettuce at Feb. 20-24 Levels

Emergency 60-day price ceilings were placed on lettuce and spinach last night by the Office of Price Administration, bringing the total number of fresh vegetables under price control to seven.

Lettuce and spinach prices under the ceilings can go no higher than they were during the period from February 20 to 24.

Vegetables on which ceilings were placed Monday night were: tomatoes, carrots, cabbage and beans, both green and waxed. Previously, white potatoes and onions were brought under control.

The new ceilings on lettuce and spinach reflected sharp price advances for these two foods during the past few days.

OPA last night also gave its local offices authority to increase the ceiling prices of these vegetables and lettuce and spinach as well, wherever necessary to remedy any local inequities.

All of these actions on fresh vegetables are aimed at preventing sharply increased retail prices, resulting both from frost damage to Southern crops and from an anticipated switch in public demand from canned vegetables to fresh varieties because of rationing of processed foods.

The OPA also slightly reduced the housewives' sugar allotment by announcing that the next period quota of 5 pounds must last for 11 weeks. This will mean stretching the 5-pound ration a little further than previous allotments of 3 pounds for six weeks. The next ration stamp, number 12, becomes valid on March 16 and will last until June 1.

Soviet Army Drives Ahead Despite Mud

Register Gains In Surge Toward Rail Junctions Guarding Dnieper

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Feb. 25.—The Red army surging westward over a 300-mile front in a race against spring mud was reported early today to have toppled several more Axis strongholds in the drive toward Poltava and Konotop, Ukraine rail junctions guarding approaches to the Nazi Dneiper River line.

The regular midnight communique recorded by the Soviet Monitor said another large populated place west of Kharkov had fallen, reported fresh gains in the effort to encircle Orel, hinge of the southern and central fronts, and told of the trapping of two German battalions (approximately 1600 men) in the western Caucasus.

The Russians said those two battalions now were being annihilated after refusing to surrender.

Nazis Counterattack

Heavy German counterattacks with tank and plane support were acknowledged in the Donets Basin. The Russians admitted German units had driven a wedge into their lines southwest of Kramatorsk. This town is about 50 miles above Stalino.

Thirteen German tanks were destroyed in the fighting, but the bulletin did not tell of the final outcome.

The locality seized west of Kharkov was not identified. The communique said 200 German bodies were counted, and large quantities of war material captured. This Soviet column was within 50 miles of Poltava on the basis of Soviet dispatches, and another operating from Krasnograd to the south was at least 10 miles nearer.

In the Maloarkhangelsk sector 40 miles below Orel, the communique said the Russians were fighting for possession of another large populated place, and had killed 200 more Germans.

Slowdown Indicated

Dispatches said a thaw was beginning in the Ukraine, and the comparative vagueness of the Soviet midnight bulletin indicated that muddy roads might have slackened Red army operations.

West of Rostov in the push along the Sea of Azov the Russians said the Nazis "threw in motorized infantry and tanks, and supported by aircraft launched fierce counter-attacks" after the Russians first cracked the enemy's lines.

"All enemy counterattacks were repulsed with heavy losses," the communique added. "More than 600 enemy officers and men were killed."

Several more populated places were captured in the Western Caucasus drive from Krasnodar toward Novorossisk, the bulletin said. Russian units last were reported 40 miles east of Novorossisk.

Tass dispatches said "the offensive in the Donets basin is grad-

Roosevelt Sees Increasing Responsibility for American U.

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

President Roosevelt said yesterday that American University has a "heavy responsibility" to discharge in the world of the future.

In a message read at impressive convocation ceremonies marking the fiftieth anniversary of the university's incorporation by Congress, the Chief Executive declared, in part:

"Because of your proximity to the seat of our national Government, because of your Christian traditions, and because of your virile youth, you have an opportunity for initiative, for constructive thinking, for practical idealism, for national service, and for international collaboration."

New Frontier

Speaking shortly after Mr. Roosevelt's message was heard, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University since 1941, said in his convocation sermon that the institution now enters upon the "threshold years of a new frontier of human relationships."

Explaining that those "new frontiers" have developed during the last three decades of modern technology, Dr. Douglass said that "our life is changed in type and quality, and the range of living."

Dr. Douglass observed that the current world conflict is an object lesson, and that education has failed "to produce," and stated that "the modern problem is how society is to be organized within the framework of technology. This means new types and attitudes."

Dwelling on education's task today, the President declared that "the world about us cries for an education with more fundamental undergirdings, more spiritual coherence, and more spontaneous responsibility."

Revising of Functions

"Our age is the age of human engineering," he said. "Technology forces education to reconsider its functions and its objectives just as it forces government to inquire whether its structure and bureaucracies are ample for the age. Wars are not anachronisms; they are object lessons in the adequacies of the minds, the souls and institutional designs of human beings."

U. S. Bombers Delivered Final Punch at Retreating Rommel

By Graham Hovey
International News Service Staff Writer

With American Forces in Tunisia, Feb. 24.—Perched high on the slopes of Djebel Hata, 15 miles northwest of the Kasserine Pass, I watched our medium and heavy bombers deliver one of the final punches which forced the Germans and Italians to retire to the pass from which they had gingerly poked their noses Saturday.

When I stopped at the combat team's headquarters at sundown yesterday, reports were coming in from reconnaissance patrols which indicated that the few remaining enemy vehicles left on the plain were scurrying back to the pass as rapidly as possible.

An idea of the Americans' success in the engagement can be gained from statistics. German and Italian prisoners taken can be counted in the hundreds; enemy tanks and armored cars knocked out or abandoned, in scores. In addition, a substantial amount of guns, ammunition and supplies was seized.

Coordination turned the trick, according to military authorities on the scene. High officers of the Army's famed "Task Force X," which handled the ground assignment, were lavish in their praise of the Air Force's work. Within the task force, the tank crews lauded the artillery units while the boys who manned the big guns gave full credit to the fighters in the General Shermans and Grants.

And, as an American major said—pointing to a German officer's new tunic with blue and silver braid embroidered with "Afrika Korps"—"I guess that shows we were playing against the first team, doesn't it?"

The battle really was won while late-afternoon shadows were moving across the picturesque Thala Valley Monday, and during a three-hour period later that evening.

The task force handled the afternoon show, and that evening, the American and British air forces ignored bad weather to carry out one of the biggest missions of the African war. For 180 minutes, waves of bombers poured tons of

Hitler Hints New 'Terror' In Nazi Rule

Party Must Rouse Germany to Danger, Fuehrer Declares

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 24.—Reasserting his confidence in victory, Adolf Hitler today promised a "mobilization of the spiritual and material values of Europe" such as never before witnessed for war, but hinted that the struggle might continue for years, and that there still were difficulties on the home front.

He asserted "the gigantic mass of the German people is standing behind the new Reich and the National Socialist world of thought which is inspiring it," but indicated all was not well within Nazi Germany and Occupied Europe, that the Nazi party must "break terror with 10-fold terror."

The Fuehrer addressed a 1000-word proclamation to a Munich meeting of party followers. It was read for him, for he was still "with the German soldiers fighting in the East because it is there that the fate of Germany and Europe will be decided—a decision which

Churchill Has Pneumonia, but Is Improving

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill's illness, now reported for the first time as pneumonia, has again brought out the suggestion that a small, office-free war cabinet should be established.

Edgar Louis Granville, one of Churchill's most persistent critics, indicated today he would raise the question in Commons, arguing that if the Prime Minister had been ill for a long period it would have been of the utmost importance that such a war cabinet be ready to take over.

The Prime Minister, confined to his bed for the last several days with what had been described as acute catarrh, was reported improving today.

"The pneumonia is clearing, but his temperature has not yet settled," said a bulletin from No. 10 Downing Street.

Huge Plane Flies Empty 2000 Miles

That mysterious crash of an Army transport plane in Mexico two weeks ago which baffled authorities was cleared up yesterday. It turned out to be a veritable "Flying Dutchman" of the skies which had flown 2000 miles with no one aboard. Pointed toward Norway when last seen above Florida, it finally had landed far away in the opposite direction.

On February 10, a four-engined Army C-87, cargo version of the Consolidated Liberator bomber, was seen to crash into a mountain in Mexico. It was identified by Army officers there, but the trouble was—military officials had no such plane missing in the area.

The day before, however, an unmanageable C-87 that was rapidly losing altitude had been abandoned by its crew off the Atlantic Coast of Florida after it had been pointed northeast, heading out into the ocean.

Two of Crew Missing

Army officials didn't see how it could be the same plane, even though there were no bodies in or near the Mexican crash. But investigation and serial numbers in the wreckage showed that it was.

Announcing this "stranger than fiction" flight yesterday, the War Department said that two members of the plane crew are missing—Second Lieut. Bernard A. Brannon of Chattanooga, Tenn., the assistant navigator, and Pvt. Stanley Gutowski of Bayonne, N. J., the radio operator—apparently drowned in the Atlantic. Six others aboard were picked up by Coast Guard vessels.

What happened was this:

The big transport took off from a base in southern Florida, the night of February 9, with a crew

Tulagi Hinted as New Base For Further Pacific Advances

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Indications that American forces are rapidly developing Tulagi harbor into an advance naval base and possible spearhead for further advances in the Solomons were given in a Navy report on South Pacific action yesterday.

An official communique telling of a new flurry of aerial activity in the area announced that Japanese planes had raided American positions on Tulagi Island, which is just 20 miles north of Guadalcanal.

No details were given, but as this was the first reported attack on the island since the southeastern Solomons were seized by American forces last August, military observers here took it to mean that we are at least developing it as a naval base.

Tulagi harbor—lying between Tulagi and Florida Islands—is one of the best natural harbors in the entire area. Along with the nearly completed airfield on Guadalcanal, it was regarded as the chief prize gained by the United States when we captured the lower Solomons more than six months ago.

American engineers rushed the airfield to completion, but little use was made of Tulagi. It was too exposed while the battle for Guadalcanal was raging. But with the southeastern Solomons now firmly in our hands, Tulagi harbor can be turned to advantage. Some facilities probably are being installed, Navy men say, so that it can be employed as an advance naval base.

The aerial action reported in yesterday's communique covered

Allies Shell Foe Pouring Out Through Tunisia Gap

Desert Fox Handed His First Defeat In French Africa; Air Attack Heavy

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 24.—Combined British and American forces threw Field Marshal Rommel's tank columns into full retreat from the outskirts of Thala today, handing them their first defeat in Tunisia, and tonight Allied artillery lobbed tons of explosive steel into German positions in the narrow Kasserine Pass and on the beaten rear-guard columns withdrawing through it.

The big guns were giving the German tank columns no chance to rest and reform, and hundreds of Allied planes left a trail of smoking Axis transport and dying German soldiers all the way from Thala's approaches to Feriana far south of the opposite end of Kasserine Pass.

(Reuters reported in London that latest information indicated the bulk of enemy forces were retreating through the pass, with only a rearguard left to hold the mouth of the gap against furious continuing Allied attacks.

(The British News Agency also said increasing numbers of fighting units were now reaching the British Eighth Army before the Mareth defenses in Southern Tunisia, and that supply was the main preoccupation at the moment.

Hundreds of Allied planes and Allied ground forces began hitting Marshal Rommel yesterday morning, inflicting the first major setback on the Axis troops since they lashed out on their offensive 11 days ago.

Then the Allied artillery hastened the Axis retreat into the mouth of the Pass.

Heavy Aerial Smash

The American-British aerial smash far overwhelmed the initial German Stuka efforts in the recent fight at Faid, and was continuing.

Rommel's retreat began yesterday and by today at least 300 Axis prisoners and large quantities of German materiel had fallen into Allied hands.

American armored forces had hammered back his thrust westward through the Kasserine toward Tebessa, which lies inside Algeria, and British and American units together had inflicted heavy casualties in the battle for Thala. Rommel had burst through to within 3 miles of that tactically important point before his attack began to collapse, and with it the whole of his offensive to the west.

Allied Communique

With the coming of daylight yesterday, Marauders, Mitchells, Bostons, Hurribombers and even the great Flying Fortresses began to strew explosives upon the retreating German columns under cover of Spitfires, Airacobras and Lightnings.

There also were reports here that the veteran British Eighth Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery was attacking with increas-

Film Shows Rommel In Africa, Says Berlin

By the Associated Press

The Berlin radio reported yesterday that the latest German newsreel showed Field Marshal Erwin Rommel "standing in the front line of the Gabes position, in the midst of the soldiers of his African tank army."

The broadcast, heard by the Associated Press in New York, possibly was designed to appear as an answer to a variety of recent reports about the marshal.

Some of these said he had been wounded, had returned to Germany or even was in the field on the Russian front.

Action Desired

Ruml Plan Group Seeks Early Vote

By Samuel W. Bell
New York Herald Tribune Staff Writer

A move designed to force an early House vote on the Ruml plan for the collection of personal income taxes on a pay-as-you-go basis by discharging the House Ways and Means Committee from further consideration of the measure, was taking form yesterday, backed by a substantial number of House members.

Representative Pehr G. Holmes (Republican) of Massachusetts said he was prepared to file such a discharge petition on the Carlson bill, designed to implement the Ruml plan, if the Ways and Means Committee continued to fail in its current efforts to reach an early conclusion on pay-as-you-go tax legislation.

"I believe the members of the House are entitled to vote on the Ruml plan," Mr. Holmes declared, "and from what I have heard a majority of them are ready to do so."

Republican Stand Cheers Adherents

Advocates of the Ruml plan were cheered yesterday as strong Republican support appeared to be gathering behind the proposal to abate all of one year's individual income taxes to put taxpayers on a pay-as-you-go basis.

An informed Capitol Hill source said that when the House Ways and Means Committee passed on a modified form of the plan originated by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, all 10 Republican committeemen voted for it.

However, the plan was put aside for the time being when the 15 Democrats on the committee voted against it. The vote was taken last Friday in a secret session but not disclosed until yesterday.

Subcommittee Named

The committee rejected all pending pay-as-you-go proposals, including the modified Ruml plan, and turned over to a subcommittee the job of drafting a compromise.

Reports circulated that the Republican members of some State delegations, including New Jersey and Missouri, might vote solidly for the Ruml proposal when the tax legislation comes up in the House.

Representative McLean (Republican) of New Jersey, a committee member, told newspapermen he had contacted the 11 House Republican members from his State and "in my judgment all favor some plan along the line as suggested by Mr. Ruml."

Missouri Favorable

Representative Bennett (Republican) of Missouri, similarly expressed the view that the seven Republican members from Missouri would support the idea of bypassing one tax year.

A prominent Republican, who asked that his name not be used, predicted the House would adopt the plan, that "strong Republican support will be thrown behind it, and for every Republican vote we lose we will pick up two Democrats." There are now 222 Democrats to 209 Republican House members.

Roosevelt Naming To Court Called 'Simple Politics'

Senator Ellender (Democrat) Louisiana, attributed President Roosevelt's nomination of James V. Allred to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals to "pure, simple and unadulterated politics" in a statement yesterday announcing he will fight Senate confirmation "to the limit of my ability."

Ellender's statement followed his return from Puerto Rico, where he was a member of a Senate committee investigating economic conditions. He said he was "keenly disappointed" to learn of Allred's nomination to fill a vacancy created by the recent death of Judge Rufus Foster of Louisiana.

Delegation Opposed

(Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana yesterday said The Post gave an inaccurate impression of the action of the Louisiana delegation Monday in assailing the appointment of Allred as a political "payoff." The story gave the impression that members of the delegation were divided on issuance of the statement.

("The Louisiana delegation is unanimous in its opposition to the Allred appointment," Hebert stated. "There is no disagreement whatsoever.")

The Senator said he and Senator Overton (Democrat) Louisiana, together had discussed the judgeship with Attorney General Biddle shortly before Ellender left for Puerto Rico on February 4.

"We were assured by the attorney general that our candidate, the Hon. Archie T. Higgins of New Orleans, met the requirements and that his name would be submitted to the President at an early date.

"There was no suggestion from the Attorney General that Judge Higgins was not acceptable. He agreed with us that Louisiana had a stronger claim to the judgeship than any other State in the circuit, and the Attorney General did not indicate that there would be any difficulty in having representation on the court for Louisiana. . . .

"I can't help but feel that pure, simple and unadulterated politics caused the President to select Mr. Allred. It is regrettable, to say the least, that the President should follow such a course during this, the most critical period in our history. . . .

"I propose to fight the nomination of Judge Allred to the limit of my ability. I realize that the conflict will be a hard one. I have faith in the Senate of the United States, and I am convinced that justice and fairness will prevail."

Allred resigned from the Federal District Court last year to seek the Texas senatorial nomination, reportedly as an Administration candidate, against Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, who was renominated and reelected.

Texas already has one member of the Fifth Circuit bench, Louisiana none.

Gandhi Fast Fails to Move Churchill

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, Feb. 24.—Prime Minister Churchill made it clear today that the India government would continue to hold in confinement Mohandas K. Gandhi, who now is expected by his doctors at Poona to live through his 21-day hunger strike against detention.

It was a matter of one eminent invalid dealing with another, Churchill's message apparently came from his sick bed. (It was announced in London that he has been suffering from pneumonia, but is improving.)

Churchill, supporting the India government's determination to keep the Nationalist leader under detention, stressed security as a prime consideration and said that India "still is menaced" by the threat of invasion.

The previously held fears that Gandhi might die a prisoner in the Poona palace of the Aga Khan were dissipated in the fifteenth day of his fast by authoritative medical opinion that "there is no reason why he should not manage six days more."

The 73-year-old ascetic was more cheerful and showing less distress, and his followers felt their prayers were being answered.

The Prime Minister addressed his message to Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Indian Nationalist leader, who had appealed to Churchill and U. S. Ambassador William Phillips for Gandhi's unconditional release.

Churchill told Sapru that the reasons for which Gandhi and others are detained "have been fully explained and well understood," and that the reasons still exist.

"The first duty of the government of India and His Majesty's government is to defend the soil of India from invasion, by which it still is menaced, and to enable India to play her part in the general cause of the United Nations," Churchill said.

Dirksen Urges Naming Of 'Tough Food Czar'

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois yesterday proposed, in effect, replacement of Agriculture Secretary Wickard by a "good tough food czar" as he led the House in a bipartisan denunciation of Administration food production and farm manpower policies.

Dirksen, influential minority member of the Appropriations Committee, charged that 65 million dollars President Roosevelt recently asked Congress to appropriate for recruitment of farm labor would be used by his advisers to finance a program of farm "socialization."

The attack came as Secretary Wickard, after admitting that the shortage of skilled farm labor may become so critical the Army will be asked to furlough individual farm workers, asked the aid of Congress in formulating a war food plan.

"We need guidance from Congress concerning the direction in which our wartime agricultural program should go and the methods by which such should be implemented," he told the House Agriculture Committee.

Wants It Slugged Out

Dirksen accused War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt and Farm Security Administrator C. B. Baldwin of allowing desires "to extend social controls to the farms of the country" to interfere with mobilization of farm labor.

"Why doesn't Wickard stand toe to toe and slug it out with these social reformers?" Dirksen shouted.

Dirksen said he was "sorry to say" he does not believe Wickard is "going to get tough enough" to get larger allocations of steel for farm machinery from War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson or to combat McNutt.

"I have seen no evidence to indicate that he (Wickard) is going to do the job," he said.

Dirksen and other House members ridiculed President Roosevelt's program for assignment of soldiers to help with "emergency" harvests.

The Secretary expressed his continued opposition to trying to pass increased production costs on to the consumer in the shape of higher food prices.

"Substantial increases in farm prices would inevitably lead to increases in prices and costs all along the line, and might result in an inflation which, in the long run, would be even more ruinous to farmers than to others," he said.

Other Answers

Other ways of giving farmers increased returns were submitted by him as follows:

1. Government support of prices on all farm products needed in the war effort.

2. A Government offer to purchase certain products—such as soybeans, peanuts, flaxseed, canned vegetables, sugar beets and perhaps others—and resell them to processors and distributors in line with the OPA price ceilings.

3. An offer to farmers of incentive payments on needed war crops to enable the producers to meet increased costs without raising consumer prices.

Secretary Wickard's plan to offer incentive payments was refused by an Agriculture Subcommittee on Appropriations.

In addition to securing furloughs for individual skilled farm workers in the armed services, he told the subcommittee he was hoping to get "furloughs" also for farm boys now working in industrial plants.

Also, he expressed belief all nonfarm employers should be appealed to not to recruit farm people.

The labor recruiting programs of the department, he said, would cost about $65,000,000. Action on his request for this amount was deferred by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday as "important but needing more study."

Restaurants To Cut Canned Food Use 50%

Under rationing provisions announced yesterday, restaurants and other eating establishments must limit by approximately 50 per cent the amount of processed foods served to their customers.

They will register for point ration books during the first 10 days of March and be allowed about three-fifths of a ration point for each person served during December.

Although this is more than the half point per meal allowed individual registrants, the OPA pointed out that restaurant owners cannot calculate for each meal with the same accuracy a housewife can—and must be given a wider margin for waste because the number of patrons fluctuates from day to day.

Average point values, for computing restaurant inventories of stock on hand were fixed by OPA as follows:

Canned and bottled processed foods, dry beans of all kinds, peas, and lentils, 11 points per pound.

Frozen foods, 13 points per pound.

Dried, and dehydrated fruits, soups, and soup mixtures, 18 points per pound.

This is more severe than the 8-point allowance permitted home users for stocks on hand. The same point value for purchasing will be used by all buyers, whether institutional or individual, the OPA said.

All boarding houses serving more than 50 persons must register for the restaurant ration books, the points in which will cover two months rather than one.

Ursula Parrott On Trial Today In Desertion Case

Miami, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Novelist Urusula Parrott today was ordered to trial tomorrow on a charge of undermining the loyalty and discipline of the armed forces as well as on other accusations growing out of the flight of a soldier friend from an Army stockade at Miami Beach.

Federal Judge John W Holland overruled a defense effort to have the undermining charge stricken from the indictment, which also names the novelist for aiding and harboring a deserter.

The judge held the Pvt. Michael Neely Bryan, whom Mrs. Parrott is accused of spiriting out of the stockade, was incarcerated, "and had a negative duty not to escape."

destruction into Kasserine Pass and its northwest approaches.

The next morning I met Capt. Henry Frankel of Mount Vernon, N. Y., returning in a jeep to combat headquarters with maps and documents left on the battlefield by the enemy.

"Driving down the Wadi," he told me, "if you want to see the booty we captured before it's taken back. I think the quantities will surprise you."

But I did not have to go even that far to get an idea. Several soldiers went by within 15 minutes, riding captured Italian motorcycles. On one side of the road, Italian prisoners were digging ditches.

I stopped to talk with some tank crews commanded by Lieut. James Curry of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Sgt. Frank Bonad of Corning, N. Y. Both the men's crews had been in Monday's battle.

I found Sgt. Johnny A. Fraser of Richmond, Ky., fondling a small rifle—his private booty—and Pvt. Joe C. Romback of Rochester, N. Y., wearing an Italian helmet.

I congratulated the boys on their part in the victory and asked them if the engagement was as hot as the Sidi Bou Zid battle last week.

Said Bonad: "Tell the folks back home it was no honeymoon, no picnic out there. But tell them we got in a few good ones, and that we'll keep punching."

Six Fliers Killed In Bomber Crash

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Six men from MacDill Field were killed when the medium bomber they were flying crashed into the Gulf of Mexico near Venice, Fla., last night.

The dead are: Flight Officer Swain M. Higbee, Lexington, Okla., pilot; Second Lieut. Albert E. Jones, jr., Houston, Tex., co-pilot; Second Lieut. John A. Genty, Chicago, bombardier; Sergt. Lawrence E. Broach, North Salem, Ind.; Sergt. Ernest H. Nichols, Courtland, Ala., and Sergt. Gerald I. Crookston, Alliance, Ohio.

Clipper Turned Over, Dancer Believes

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, Feb. 24.—A woman survivor of the Yankee Clipper crash Monday night told today how the great flying boat apparently overturned just before it plunged into the Tagus River.

The story was related by Jean Rognan, one of seven Broadway headliners en route to entertain American soldiers abroad. Her husband and dancing partner, Roy, was among 24 of the 39 passengers reported dead or missing.

"My husband and I were holding hands and enjoying the marvelous scenery," she said. "Then we sighted the airport—the lights were on but we could still see the ground. Suddenly we must have been upside down. We saw water at the side window and the land lights above us."

Doesn't Mention Fire

She said she saw one wing of the plane touch the water three times but did not mention the big ship catching fire.

"The confusion was terrific," she continued. "My husband yelled to me to 'hold this brief case while I remove my trousers to swim better and take you.' The water was coming up and I desperately kicked at a window to free him. But he was knocked down as the clipper began sinking. He cried my name and waved. I cried back his name and saw him go down.

"The water pushed me out and in less than two minutes I found myself floating on the surface and I was pulled into a boat."

Confidence in Pilot

Mrs. Rognan is recovering from injuries and shock. She said she would be willing to fly back home with the same pilot, Capt. R. O. D. Sullivan, a survivor.

Grace Drysdale, widely known puppeteer, who suffered leg and facial injuries, said her "greatest fear was that I would come up under the clipper when I went deep into the river. But I saw the sky again instead, before I fainted. The water was so cold."

Jane Froman, stage and radio singer who also suffered slight face and leg injuries, was reported by attendants to be "recovering splendidly."

Special House Unit Launches Check on Draft Deferments

A special House Military Affairs Subcommittee yesterday sent investigators into Federal agencies to check on draft deferments of Government workers as the opening phase of an investigation of policies of the Selective Service system in Washington and "throughout the country."

Records of District local draft boards and draft appeals boards also are to be studied by subcommittee investigators to determine to what extent decisions on deferments may have been affected by the "influence" of Federal officials.

The investigation was ordered by the Military Affairs Committee on motion of Representative Harness (Republican) of Indiana, although earlier this week a committee named by President Roosevelt drew a favorable comparison between deferments in the Federal service and those in private industry.

The committee, headed by Paul Bellamy, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, criticized, however, overlapping Federal jobs and the high rate of personnel turnover in the Government.

In a statement issued by the subcommittee following its initial meeting yesterday, the investigation was described as an attempt to determine to what extent draft eligibles "are evading their military obligation by holding replaceable positions in Government and industry."

The subcommittee disclosed that it was calling upon Federal agencies to supply it with the names of all employes who have been deferred at the request of agency heads or by appeals boards. Harness said the subcommittee wanted to know why the District draft appeal board has "overruled local boards and deferred men who ought not to have been deferred."

Similar studies, the subcommittee said, will be made in "various localities" to run down "unwarranted industrial deferments."

The subcommittee is composed of Representatives Costello of California, chairman; Sparkman of Alabama, Gaithings of Arkansas, Philbin of Massachusetts (Democrats), and Arends of Illinois, Elston of Ohio, and Harness of Indiana (Republicans).

Senatorial Spat Delays Vote On Job-Confirmation Bill

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

A senatorial dispute described by a witness as "one of the hottest" of his experience yesterday forced postponement until Monday of a Senate Judiciary Committee vote on the McKellar bill which would give the Senate final jurisdiction over thousands of appointments in the Federal Civil Service.

With certain exceptions, the bill, sponsored by Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, would make subject to Senate confirmation Federal jobs paying $4500 a year or more.

The disputants were Senators Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, and Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana. Hatch was bitterly opposed to the bill, Wheeler was emphatically in favor of it. Their argument consumed so much of the more than two hours of the committee's closed session that Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming finally proposed that the vote, scheduled to have been taken yesterday, be delayed until Monday.

Wheeler, who had a motion before the committee calling for a vote, withdrew it and the committee adjourned.

Hatch told reporters he believed the bill, "completely destructive of the merit system, will be the greatest setback of the civil service which has transpired in many years."

The effect of the measure, he said, would be to transfer the power of making Federal appointments from the President to the Senate.

"As a matter of actual, practical application, Senators wouldn't advise and consent to appointments (as they are empowered to do by the Constitution), but would actually nominate and confirm," Hatch said.

Far from wrecking the Civil Service, Wheeler maintained that the bill would "greatly strengthen the whole system."

"In the last few years the Civil Service, with the exception of the old agencies, has practically been destroyed and thousands of appointments have been made without the necessity of competitive examinations by various men in the inner circles of departments who have personal pets," he said.

As submitted to the committee by a subcommittee, the bill would terminate the appointments of workers earning $4500 a year or more on next June 30 and make reappointment subject to Senate confirmation. Exempted from this requirement would be Army and Navy officers, civilian employes who have entered the armed services and workers employed under civil service regulations prior to January 1, 1936. No special provision was made for scientific and technical employes, as had been made in earlier drafts of the measure.

ually coming to a head," and also said that "the final outcome is nearing in the Caucasus" where German troops are pinned into a narrow pocket based on Novorossisk.

The Wednesday noon communique said Russian troops had plunged on west of the Sumy-Lebedin-Akhtyrka salient which is the apex of the triangle. Three hundred germans were killed in a fight for one town, and the Red army knocked out more strongly fortified enemy points, the communique said.

Soviet troops were said to have discarded their fur hats and warmer clothing in the face of warm winds blowing up from the Dnieper River, a long curving barrier where the Germans are expected to make a firm stand if spring mud doesn't aid them sooner.

PINCERS—A Red army column (arrow) captured Maloarkhangelsk and threatened Orel from the southeast yesterday, Moscow dispatches said. A pincers maneuver (arrows 2 and 3) developed on Poltava (A), German-held objective. Meanwhile, the Nazis threw large aerial forces into the battle west of Rostov

The fall of Maloarkhangelsk, 40 miles south of Orel, further endangered the Nazi base. Other Soviet units were last reported only 30 miles to the east and about the same distance to the southeast. (German dispatches said the Red army also was attacking north of the city.)

Maloarkhangelsk fell after several days of stiff fighting. The Nazis were said to have thrown fresh reserves of tanks and planes in vain against the Russians who stabbed through elaborate barriers of antitank ditches, minefields and barbed wire.

Rommel Retreats in Tunisia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

YANKS AND BRITONS DRIVE NAZIS BACK—American and British forces (arrows) yesterday pressed retreating German forces commanded by Nazi Marshal Rommel from Thala, Axis objective in Tunisia. Broken line is high tide of German advance. The Nazis are apparently withdrawing to a line from Sbeitla to Kasserine to Thelepte to Feriana (symbol of pointers)

ing power in southeastern Tunisia.

The Allied communique thus described the earlier phases of the German defeat:

"Following heavy fighting which has continued for the past three days in the area north and northwest of Kasserine, American and British forces, after successfully holding the enemy's attacks, forced his withdrawal in this sector.

"Our Infantry and armored units were in contact with the enemy throughout the day, inflicting heavy casualties, taking many prisoners and securing some abandoned enemy material.

"In the Essadour area west of Ousseltia (well to the north of the main action and apparently representing an unsuccessful Axis attempt at diversion) an enemy attack was successfully repulsed."

(A dispatch of the British News Agency Reuters reported that aside from the losses inflicted upon the enemy in the Kasserine Valley, which is walled by high mountains, a battalion of 1000 Italians had been trapped in another pass leading toward Siliana, about 70 miles northeast of Kasserine. It was said that French Moroccan troops allowed the Italians to go in and then sealed one exit while a Scottish regiment closed the other.)

The largest single group of Axis prisoners known to have been taken—a mixed force of 300 Germans and Italians—was captured by American forces which attacked down the Hatab River from the vicinity of Tebessa. They likewise took enough small arms to equip an entire battalion.

Two Associated Press correspondents at the front—Harold V. Boyle and Noland Norgaard—described the turning of the tide against Rommel.

Boyle, standing on a ridge within 2 miles of Thala, saw the Germans and Italians backtracking under the shock of attacks by British tanks and American artillery. He reported, on the authority of British tankmen, that 10 German Mark IV tanks had been destroyed in a single day.

Norgaard told how American artillery had begun moving up Monday night to bombard the retreating German forces between the narrow walls of the Kasserine Pass, and he added that these batteries had gone forward "over a broad battlefield littered with German and Italian tanks and other equipment."

From Cairo, meanwhile, it was announced that liberator bombers of the Ninth U. S. Air Force in an attack on the harbor and ferry slips at Messina in Sicily had scored direct hits and left fires in the harbor works and oil tanks. An enemy ship at anchor was hit. No American plane was lost.

New Nazi 'Terror' Hinted by Hitler

must and will end in our victory."

Hitler asserted "the German people will mobilize and use their forces to an extent exceeding that in any war in history . . .

"Neither shall we hesitate a single second to call upon the countries which are responsible for the outbreak of this war to do their bit in the fatal struggle," he said in an apparent reference to fallen France.

"We shall not scruple about foreign lives at a time when such hard sacrifices are exacted from our own lives," he declared, but did not amplify that statement.

As to the home front, Hitler declared that "in these coming months and perhaps years the party will have to fulfill its second great historic task, namely to rouse the nation to the greatness of its danger, to strengthen the sacred faith, to instill strength in weak characters and ruthlessly to destroy saboteurs.

"The party has to enlighten in places where enlightenment is being rejected. It has to break terror with 10-fold terror. "It has to extinguish traitors whoever they be and whatever their disguise who follow aims hostile to the people."

It was the second time within a month that Hitler had addressed his people indirectly.

He told his followers that they had learned fanatical party faith from him and assured them that "the same fanaticism still inspires me today with the same intensity and it will never leave me as long as I live.

"Today, too, I am inspired by the same will power to resolve to the last consequence the task which fate has entrusted to me," he asserted, adding:

"I have a right to believe that destiny has chosen me to fulfill this task. Without it I could not have survived all the obstacles and assaults to the power of Germany, and crowned them by victories such as world history has never witnessed, and at the same time borne the sorrows which perhaps would have broken countless less strong characters."

D. C. Marine Reporter Handles Tail Gun in Bombing Mission

By Sergt. Samuel E. Stavisky

Guadalcanal, Jan. 22 (Delayed). We sighted the target in the jungle clearing below, and the Marine Corps pilot zoomed the dive-bomber up to 6000 feet, circled and leveled off.

"Here we go," he warned over the radiophone.

Instinctively I braced against the cockpit seat and tightened by two-fisted grip on the dual machine guns.

For a split second, the Dauntless Douglas poised, as if she were a giant eagle eyeing her prey. Then, with screeching hate, she hurled herself earthward—down—down—down—with terrifying speed.

Blue sky and green earth rushed to embrace each other, and in that flicking instant it seemed we would be crushed between them.

Abruptly, the plane whipsnapped out of the plunge, and streaked away to escape the explosive fury of its unshackled bomb.

Out and up the Dauntless fled, and below a geyser of smoke hurtled up where the bomb had hit the mark.

Earlier that afternoon the pilot, Staff Sergt. John L. Milby, 27, of West Point, King William County, Va., and this correspondent as his gunner, had reported to the operations headquarters.

Lieut. Harold Payne, U. S. N., 29, of 2901 Eighteenth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C., pointed at a panoramic photomap of Northwestern Guadalcanal where the Japs were entrenched. The area was marked off in chalk, with an inscribed invitation to the fliers: "Open Season."

"Here," said the officer, indicating Tassafaronga Point, several miles beyond the American lines, "you will find a rubbish heap in a clearing. We think it's a camouflage for a Jap supply dump. We want it blown up.

"Further up, at Bonina Point, look around for enemy activity. The last patrol out noticed movement in that sector. Good luck, boys."

"Dot" was the plane's name. She'd been around some, as clearly testified by the scars of ack-ack shapnel and bullets on her fuselage. And two bright red Rising Suns were emblazoned on her sides—one for the transport she had bombed and sunk, one for the Zero brought down by the gunner.

"Dot's" regular tail-gunner, Corpl. Simon Cavage, 21, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., whose post I was taking told me about operating the machinegun, radio, parachute and life-jacket. I climbed into the cockpit, shifted the swivel seat so I faced the tail, swung the guns into position, and adjusted the goggles.

"Don't forget," the gunner shouted, "if you have to bail out, dive for the wing, and you'll clear the tail."

One roll around Henderson Field, and we flew out to pick up the coastline leading to the target.

We cruised easily, and dipped in greeting to a nine-bomber formation returning from an attack in the upper Solomons. Below, a transport lolled in the calm waters, and Navy torpedo boats buzzed over the surface like water bugs.

We spied our guideposts, four forlorn Jap transports, blasted, beached and rusted, sticking out of the shore shallows, and in between, scores of wrecked small landing craft.

We rode along at 500 feet, seeing no movement below. We reached Tassafaronga Point, where the rubbish heap was easily visible. We glided over and down slid a 100-pound bomb, then another.

"Nice shooting," I yelled into the mouthpiece.

"Nice work if you can get it," the pilot returned.

We soared low along the coast, over Bonina Point, searching for activity. The pilot called my attention to a small side road, apparently running into a jungle dead end.

"Strafe the dead-end, and maybe we'll scare something up," radiophoned Milby. He opened a burst with his machine guns and I swung my own into action, sweeping the trees and jungle growth. Nothing stirred. There was only the sputter of our guns.

Our two-hour bombing patrol was almost up. We sped along the coast to Cape Esperance and then back over our lines to make a graceful landing.

Milby, a groundling mechanic at the Naval Air Station, Washington, D. C., before winning his wings, grinned as he climbed out of the front cockpit.

"I was wondering," he said, "what you'd have done if a Zero had struck at our tail."

I also grinned . . .

6 Billion More Urged for War

tion for direct war activities.

Big items were these:

Forty million dollars for the Public Roads Administration to continue its access roads program.

Twenty-two million dollars more to the Treasury for expenses of selling and printing war bonds.

Ten millions for the Office of Education for training warworkers.

An additional $6,150,000 for the Bureau of Internal Revenue to help it collect the increased wartime volume of taxes, and to supervise boosts in salaries over $5000 under the economic stabilization program.

In studying Taft's day-care proposal, the committee uncovered a break between his agency and the Federal Works Agency over which should control the day-care program. The latter organization has two sub-agencies working with the day-care problem. WPA nursery projects which are gradually being closed up, and day-care programs financed with Lanham Act funds being set up to replace the WPA service. Both are under supervision of Mrs. Florence Kerr.

the period February 21-24, Solomons dates.

Early Sunday morning, enemy planes made a light raid on our base on Espiritu Santo Island in the New Hebrides, 535 nautical miles southeast of Guadalcanal airdrome. That night came the attack on Tulagi and Tuesday morning a lone Jap plane dropped bombs on Henderson Field on Guadalcanal.

Enemy Bases Raided

Meanwhile, American planes were making three raids on enemy bases at Munda, Vila and Rekata Bay, in the middle Solomons, while a single United States reconnaissance plane scored bomb hits on a barge full of Japanese troops near Choiseul Island, in the middle Solomons.

Text of the Navy communique, No. 291, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are east longitude).

"1. On February 21:

"(a) During the morning Japanese planes carried out a light raid on United States positions on Espiritu Santo Island in the New Hebrides.

"(b) During the afternoon Avenger torpedo planes (Grumman TBF) and Dauntless dive bombers (Douglas), with fighter escort, attacked Japanese positions at Munda. Several fires were started in the target area.

"(c) During the night of February 21-22, Japanese planes raided United States positions at Tulagi in the Nggela Group of the Solomon Islands.

"2. On February 22:

"(a) A United States search plane, operating near Choiseul Island, scored bomb hits on an enemy barge loaded with Japanese soldiers.

"(b) During the late afternoon, Airacobras (Bell P-39), Corsairs (Vought F4U) and Lightnings (Lockheed P-38) strafed enemy positions at Rekata Bay on the northern shore of Santa Isabel Island.

"3. On February 23, during the early morning, an enemy plane dropped bombs on the airfield at Guadalcanal.

"4. During the night of February 23-24, Liberator heavy bombers (Consolidated PB4Y) bombed enemy positions at Vila and at Munda in the New Georgia Group. All United States planes returned."

Navy Department Announces 55 Casualties

The Navy Department yesterday announced 55 naval casualties, including three dead and 52 missing. Among the missing is Walter Fred Miller, jr., seaman, first class, U. S. N. R., whose father formerly lived at 104 Mississippi Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and who now resides in Pennsylvania.

Also reported missing is Dennis Russell Hartman of Foreswood, Va.

Total casualties of the Naval Forces now amount to 23,670, including 6648 dead, 12,552 missing and 4470 wounded.

IT'S A PROBLEM FOR HER, TOO—Mrs. Prentiss Brown, wife of the Price Administrator, and her daughter, Barbara, study the family's War Ration Books 2. The Browns living in Washington include mother, father, daughter and son

Nondrivers' Gas Books Asked

District motorists, as well as those in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland, who do not obtain 1943 auto tags or who have placed their vehicles in dead storage should return their gas ration books to the local boards in order that "millions of gallons of gas may be conserved," the regional office of the Office of Price Administration ordered yesterday.

The order was issued after it was found that thousands of persons who had registered for new tags in 1942 had not registered for 1943 tags, and that thousands of other auto owners had put their cars in dead storage. By turning in the ration books, it was emphasized, motorists would guard against having the book fall into the possession of persons unauthorized to hold them.

Motorists may mail their books to rationing boards and the receipt of the books will be acknowledged by the board. Tire inspection records should be retained, it was said, to facilitate procedure in registering for another gasoline ration book when necessary.

Some 20,000 persons who filed application for tags in Washington in 1941, failed to file the same application in 1942.

Dairymen Seek Bigger Price Increase

Vigorous protests at the smallness of the Agriculture Department's proposed milk price increase for the District milkshed will be filed Monday, Bruce A. Derrick, executive secretary of the Virginia-Maryland Milk Producers Association, said yesterday.

The recommendation for 40 cents a hundred pounds increase was published by the Department of Agriculture Tuesday and will mean to District consumers a cent a quart more.

In announcing the association's protest, Derrick said dairymen were "alarmed at the Agriculture Department's about face in the matter of a price increase. Agriculture officials told us we had proved our case in asking an increase of 93 cents a hundred pounds, and then they come out with this 40-cent recommendation."

Derrick said the 40-cent increase would do little toward solving the problems of dairymen, because of the increase in feed costs in the past year would absorb all of it, but a 93-cent per 100 pounds increase—which would mean 2 cents more a quart—could be used to draw manpower back to the dairies from city jobs.

Manpower, Derrick said, is the crux of the situation. It is the reason 34 milk producers in the Washington milkshed ceased operation since October and why trucks daily take dairy cows to market for beef—merely because there is no one to milk and feed them.

More Mexican Quakes

Mexico City, Feb. 24 (AP).—Slight periodical earth tremors continued here today. The last tremors discernible to the public occurred last night, causing some alarm, but no important damage.

Registration Machinery Clicks With Amazing Smoothness

The District finished its second day of registration for rationing of canned goods without a hitch last night and school officials, accustomed to being harassed on previous rationing days, were amazed at its smoothness.

As on the first day, the only hitch was a lack of consumer declaration forms, but an SOS to the OPA brought 100,000, which were quickly distributed to form-short schools.

Boise Brister, public schools statistician, last night announced the corrected and revised totals for the first day of registration. Books issued totaled 182,167 representing 77,649 families, and the excess canned goods reported amounted to 109,098.

Officials expressed surprise at the small number of cans declared, less than one per book issued, but pointed out that most of the declarations were low. Figures on excess in coffee were not available last night, but Brister said an early survey showed very little excess coffee reported on hand on the date of November 28, and recalled that most stores were out of coffee at least part of the time then and were limiting customers to a pound or half-pound.

School officials who handle the registration are expecting some sort of trouble today. It's just been too smooth and easy to last, they say.

Czechs to Ask U. S. Aid

PRESIDENT BENJAMIN HARRISON helps raise the "Blue Goose" on the steamship New York, attended by such distinguished notables as Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster, Secretary of the Navy Benjamin F. 50 YEARS
Second to Old Glory on the North Atlantic
1893-1943

ON FEBRUARY 22, 1893, a proud and peerless flag was born . . . a flag that was to play a distinguished role in America's history as a maritime power.

On that day fifty years ago, President Benjamin Harrison, surrounded by his cabinet, by congressmen and distinguished guests, helped raise an ensign that has since become a symbol of supremacy on the North Atlantic—and is today the famous house-flag of the United States Lines.

Starting its career at the masthead of the four crack ocean liners of that day—which held the blue ribbon for Atlantic speed—the affectionately named "Blue Goose" has flown continuously on American ships. It has flown continuously on the ships of the same company—including eventually the United States Lines' America, finest vessel ever built in this country.

TODAY, United States Lines ships are cloaked in gray. Swift ocean liners are Navy transports. Modern freighters, operated by United States Lines, carry materials of war to every front where free men fight for Freedom.

We feel a humble pride in carrying to battle the traditions of such famous ships as the New York, the Philadelphia, the St. Louis, and the St. Paul, over which the house-flag of the United States Lines was first raised.

Now we celebrate the birthday of our house-flag, which we also call the "Spread Eagle." But in doing so, our eyes are not so much upon the past as on the future. We look ahead to the days when new-famed liners stream across a peaceful North Atlantic, flying Old Glory and the "Spread Eagle" in the service of a new world.

Sidelights of the War

Actor Joe E. Brown Clowns With Troops at Pacific Base

By the Associated Press

At an Advanced South Pacific Base, Feb. 14 (Delayed).—Joe E. Brown, the comedian, today told a cheering audience of soldiers and sailors he was here to give them "a good gander at my kisser and to check Willkie's expense account."

He said, however, he was making numerous detours in following up Wendell Willkie's around-the-world tour.

He and Johnny Marvin, the singer, traveling at their own expense, were the first entertainers to get near this South Pacific battle line, where reminders from home are particularly welcome.

Brown said "this trip is a memorial" to his son, an Army aviation captain, who was killed in a December crash.

70,000 Russians Die

Moscow, Feb. 24 (INS).—Seventy thousand Russian residents of Kharkov died of hunger during German occupation of the Ukrainian industrial capital, the Moscow newspaper Izvestia said today.

Of the remaining populace, 110,000 young men and women were sent to Germany for forced labor, while 14,000 Jewish residents were forced into a ghetto and coldbloodedly slaughtered, the paper reported.

Deah, Deah!

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—The influence of America and Canadian accents on the speech of British children is becoming worrisome to Geoffrey Whitworth, director of the British Drama League.

The league has begun the making of phonograph records of the traditional British accent in order to preserve it.

50,000 Tons of Bombs

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—More than 50,000 tons of bombs have been dropped by the R. A. F. bomber command on Germany, Italy and occupied countries in the last 12 months, it was stated authoritatively today.

The total tonnage for the war, this source said, was 100,000 tons, meaning that more than half had been dropped in the last year.

No Jeep, No Yanks!

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Feb. 24 (AP).—A sign of the motor age:

A Senegalese soldier shot two German parachute troopers who claimed they were Americans. He explained to his French commanding officer:

"I knew they were not Americans because they did not have a jeep."

Huge Plane Flies Empty for 2000 Miles

of six, two passengers and considerable cargo aboard. About 80 miles out a bad flutter developed in the tail, and the plane began to lose altitude rapidly.

The crew jettisoned the cargo, but the nose of the plane kept turned down, and the pilot, First Lieut. R. C. Ulmer, of Atlanta, decided it could not be flown back, and safely landed.

Ulmer, thinking he was over the coast, ordered the others to bail out, and then pointed the plane out to sea heading for Norway. He set the automatic pilot for level flight so the ship would crash far out, and jumped himself.

Somehow, the plane must have made a turn of 180 degrees and then flown empty across hundreds of miles of water and land to crash in the Mexican mountains when its fuel ran out.

The crew landed in coastal waters. All had life preservers but Brannon is unaccounted for and Gutowski lost his life belt while getting out of his parachute. Second Lieut. A. E. Lloyd of San Diego, one of the passengers, held the latter up for three hours, but lost him when seized with cramps himself. Gutewski, ill from swallowing sea water and no longer able to swim, disappeared.

Ulmer, Lloyd, First Lieut. C. W. Hauth of Baltimore, the copilot; First Lieut. R. H. Bigby of Lansing, Mich., the navigator; Second Lieut. C. K. Knutson of Des Moines, Iowa, passenger, and Pvt. K. J. Riddle of Nutley, N. J., a crew member, were rescued.

Airmen agreed that the "Case of the Flying Dutchman of the Skies" will go down in history as one of the weirdest tales of aviation. Perhaps its closest approach was the true story of a civilian training plane which flew 25 miles with no one aboard in New Jersey several years ago.

Its student pilot cranked up the motor without putting blocks under the wheels and the craft took off. It flew for some time before coming down to make a landing on a level field, not greatly damaged.

Soldier Cotton-Picking Delayed

Salt Lake City, Feb. 24 (AP).—Ninth Service Command Headquarters reported today the "movement of troops" for the purpose of picking cotton has been postponed."

The Army last Tuesday said it would permit use of soldiers in Arizona cotton fields.

At Phoenix, Ariz., Maharg, executive secretary of the Arizona Farm Bureau Federation, said the decision to postpone mustering Army personnel into Arizona's unharvested cotton fields meant that approximately 7500 bales of the war-essential fiber "probably would be lost."

President's Pilot Gets TWA Post

Kansas City, Feb. 24 (INS).—Otis F. Bryan, 35, who flew President Roosevelt on several legs of the Chief Executive's journey to Casablanca, today was elected vice president of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.

Bryan's election at a board of directors meeting was announced tonight by Jack Frye, TWA president.

Md.-D. C. CIO Greet Stalin on Army's 25th Anniversary

By the Associated Press

Boyd E. Payton, president, and Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, of the C. I. O. Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, announced yesterday they had sent greetings from the council to Premier Josef Stalin on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Red army.

A letter to Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Ambassador to the United States, requested him to convey to Stalin the "greetings of the workers affiliated with the council on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Soviet Red army," Payton said.

The letter stated: "Inspired by your magnificent victories which serve to safeguard our own beloved Nation as well as that of the great Soviet Union, we pledge to redouble our efforts to increase the production of materials for the increased military action so necessary at this time."

FREEDOM *forges its own weapons

WHEN the historians of the future write the story of this war, the part played by industry and labor will take its place as an achievement equalled only by the deeds of our armed forces.

War demands on labor and management change many peacetime concepts of individual freedom. All of us accept that as a temporary expediency. But let us not confuse the issue. Let us not forget that our America is, and will continue to be, God willing, not only a free land but a land with the highest standard of living in the world. And let us keep clearly in mind that our industrial system, which has given us the good things of life and now sustains us in war, was born of our freedom in the past and depends upon its continuance in the future.

The chief glory of the American industrial system is the private initiative which it fosters. Every company has its instances. Some from our own annals of alloy steels will be told later in this series.

It is a fitting tribute to freedom that these examples of private enterprise, born in liberty of thought and action are now contributing weightily in a war for the salvation of freedom.

Swank Doctor In Africa Does Own Washing

By Inez Robb
By International News Service

With American forces in southern Tunisia, Feb. 24—It's a shrunken world, indeed, when a reporter at America's most advanced evacuation hospital can walk into the oral surgeon who 10 years earlier chiseled two wisdom teeth out of her aching jaws at New York Fifth Avenue Hospital.

In the midst of a company street in this evacuation hospital, Dr. Clarence A. Dunn and I stared incredulously at each other.

Bundled to his ears in G. I. clothes, Dr. Dunn, chief of oral surgery here, could have passed for any G. I. soldier, complete from clumsy shoes to woolen socks.

I was equally as attractive in G. I. wool shirt and slacks, topped as by any sweaters and coats as I could carry.

We shook with laughter. Dr. Dunn reminded me that the last time he had seen me I had been a pampered wretch in a private hospital room with bath; and I reminded him that he had been a city slicker—pressed, polished and starched within an inch of his life.

Proud as can be, the doctor confessed that only two hours earlier he had washed out two suits of long underwear in his tin helmet.

Major Dunn is typical of the doctors in this Roosevelt Hospital Unit whose sensitive hands represent a fantastic sum in training and skill. Yet, in between the most delicate of operations, these same hands are awkwardly learning to wash out long-handled underwear.

Most of the 38 surgeons in the Roosevelt Hospital Unit are married men. Like Dr. Dunn they have voluntarily left a wife and children, a lucrative practice, and a comfortable home to maintain a magnificent hospital behind the fighting lines.

Mine Union Head Quits for Health; Lewis Seen Irked

Ora E. Gasaway has resigned as president of District 50, miscellaneous unit of the United Mine Workers of America, and been succeeded by John Kmetz of Nanticoke, Pa.

The membership was advised of the change in a circular which said Gasaway's resignation was "occasioned by ill health and his inability to physically continue the work of his office and the discharge of the heavy responsibilities which it entailed."

Reports have been current that John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W., had ordered a shakeup because of the failure of membership drives to produce desired results, particularly in the dairy farmer field.

Navy Fliers Tell How Plane Dive-Bombed U-Boat to Bottom

By John Henry
International News Service Staff Writer

With U. S. Naval Forces in the South Atlantic, Feb. 24.—Dramatic details of how a Navy flying boat sank a German submarine were revealed today by the aircraft crew.

Vice Admiral Jonas H. Ingram recommended citations for four of the fliers. They are Lieut. (j. g.) William R. Ford, Crescent City, Fla., pilot of the plane; Lieut (j. g.) R. S. Swan, Middletown, N. Y., and Ensign M. V. Dawkins, Sumter, S. C., who were second pilots; and Aviation Machinist's Mate Billy Goodell, Bessemer, Ala.

The big PBY amphibious plane went aloft on routine patrol soon after dawn. The submarine was sighted on the surface.

Goodell saw its wake first, shortly before noon. He called out his discovery over the phone system.

Lieutenant Ford wheeled the plane toward the streak of white churning water, opened the throttle and prepared to dive through the cloudy haze.

Then Ensign Dawkins, peering through field glasses, saw a full silhouette of the submersible.

"It's a sub! Give 'er th' gun," he screamed. Ford turned on full power, pushed forward on the yoke and said nothing. The plane throbbed through the wind and roared downward.

"In that dive," Lieut. Ford recalled, "we attained a speed much higher than the maximum allowable for our plane. Then he ordered Lieutenant Swan to "go up forward and prepare to drop our bombs."

"When I got in position," Swan said, "the sub was as plain as the thumb on your hand. But none of the men on the sub seemed to see us.

"There must have been 10 of them on deck sun-bathing. All wore trunks. I guess the splash of the waves drowned out the noise of our motors until we were almost over the target. Anyway, they didn't move until we got close.

"They certainly were startled when they saw us. Some just stood there frozen in fear. A couple threw up their hands over their heads. Suddenly they ran toward the conning tower and tried to scramble in. The sub was about to dive away and leave them, I guess.

"We were then in position for the kill."

In less than two seconds all the bombs were away.

Congressmen's Private Ration Setup Is Revealed

where an employe of the Congress by using this special board was able to secure extra rations which his local board had refused him.

Thompson stated that this case involved a "mistake" which would be corrected when this employe's present rations expire on March 3.

The employe, Lewis Deschler, parliamentarian of the House, turned to the special board after the Bethesda ration board had turned down his request for C rations. The Bethesda board learned later of Deschler's C rations and questioned him about it, thus learning of the existence of the Congressional board.

The Bethesda board made inquiries, but were unable to learn details of the operation of this unit which as far as they were concerned seemed to be a "ghost" board. It reported the matter to Maryland State headquarters in Baltimore and the situation was eventually called to the attention of new District Director Thompson.

Thompson said he did not know how Deschler's application reached the congressional board, but stated that he regarded the whole affair as a "mistake" and had written the Maryland OPA director apologizing. After March 3 when Deschler's present rations expire, the Bethesda board will have full jurisdiction over his ration, Thompson said.

The "ghost" board has a simple routine, inquiry by a reporter revealed.

Calling the telephone number of Board No. 11—a regularly setup ration board which deals with bonafide residents of the Dupont Circle area—the reporter said:

"This is the Office of Congressman. —— of ——. I want to see about the Congressman's ration card."

"Gasoline or sugar," the operator asked.

"Gasoline."

"One moment, please, I'll connect you with Mrs. Shayler."

Mrs. Frances Shayler, clerk of the special section, asked what was wanted. She offered to put the proper form "in the mail tonight" and asked for the Congressman's initials and room number in the House Office Building.

"You just have to fill out the application and return it and we will try to get the Congressman's card out promptly," Mrs. Shayler said. "They generally are sent out the same day the application is received. We try to give 24-hour service."

"What's the number of your board," the reporter asked.

"Oh, we don't have a number. Just mail it to Congressional Gasoline, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue. We're on the second floor of the Force School."

Officials explained in defense of the board that Congressmen change their address quite frequently, a fact which created a "considerable problem" for the District OPA at the start of rationing.

"Those fellows would never understand if we could not find their applications promptly, so we just thought it would be a good idea to put them all in one place," one official familiar with the early history of the special board stated.

Proved "Convenient"

The board also proved a "convenience" to Congressmen during the last election campaign when their applications for "electioneering gas" were considered, another official said. Under OPA regulations, Congressmen were permitted to get gasoline needed to tour their districts during the preelection campaign.

"Some local boards might not have been familiar with these regulations," it was said.

A reporter requested Thompson for permission to inspect the gasoline applications of the legislators, but Thompson refused, citing a section of OPA's 1943 appropriation act as forbidding him to produce the records. He acknowledged that he would be legally allowed to list the names of Congressmen using the board with the rations they received, but declined to produce any such list, stating that he did not have sufficient clerical help to devote time to the task.

All other congressional rationing problem are handled through their regular local boards, OPA officials stated. Registrars to sign up Senators for War Ration Book 2 have been available at the Capitol this week, but none were supplied for the House side because Representatives decided they would not need them, it was said. A similar special registration center was provided when War Ration Book 1—the sugar book—was issued.

Ft. Myer Rites For General Cruikshank

Military services for Brig. Gen. William M. Cruikshank, 72, United States Army, retired, a native Washingtonian and veteran of the Spanish-American War and First World War, will be conducted Friday at 3 p. m. in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial in Arlington Cemetery will follow.

General Cruikshank died after a brief illness Tuesday at Emergency Hospital. With him were his wife, Cornelia Holabird Cruikshank, and his daughter, Mrs. O. H. Kyster, jr., wife of Colonel Kyster of the Coast Artillery, stationed at Tampa, Fla.

Since retiring in 1934 after a career of 30 years, General Cruikshank made his home at the Dresden Apartments here, Connecticut Avenue and Kalorama Road Northwest. His last post was Fort Sill, Okla., where he commanded the Field Artillery School for four years.

After graduating from the United States Military Academy in 1893, he served a short term as instructor there. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he was assigned to Light Battery K of the First Artillery, with which he served at El Caney, Cuba.

Various tours in this country and the Philippines preceded a detail to the Signal Corps, during which General Cruikshank's company set up a system of wireless stations along the Mexican border. When this country entered the World War, he went to France as adjutant of the First Division, in command of the Fifteenth Field Artillery for the defense of the south Verdun sector.

He rose to the rank of temporary brigadier general and commanded the Third Artillery Brigade in the Champagne-Marne, the Aisne-Marne and St. Mihiel offensives and other battles, and after the war served with the Army of Occupation. Returning to the States in 1919 he attended General Staff College and was stationed for four years in this city. In 1925 he was made a permanent brigadier general.

General Cruikshank was awarded the decorations of Officer of the French Legion of Honor and the Distinguished Service Medal for his World War Service.

Other survivors are a brother, Charles Norman Cruikshank of New York; a sister, Mrs. Margaret F. Smith of Newark, N. J., and a granddaughter, Mary Elizabeth Kyster, Tampa.

A. R. Shepherd Dies at 70 in Alexandria

Alexander R. Shepherd, 70, son of the late Alexander R. Shepherd, first Governor of the District, died at Alexandria Hospital yesterday.

A native of Washington, Mr. Shepherd was an evaluation engineer in the income tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau. At an early age went to Mexico with his parents, and later became prominent in mining affairs in that country, following in his father's footsteps in managing the Batopilas Mining Co., in Chihuahua, Mexico.

Returning to this country in 1912, Mr. Shepherd took part in several mining ventures in California and Nevada and in 1920 entered the Government service here. His home is at 515 North Washington Street, Arlington, where he had lived the past eight years.

Surviving are his wife, the former Phoebe Elliott of Sewanee, Tenn.; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Grice Worsham, wife of Col. L. D. Worsham, stationed in Chicago, and two sons, Alexander R. Shepherd, jr., and Habersham Elliott Shepherd, both of Alexandria.

Major Hoes' Rites to Be Held At Fort Myer Chapel Tomorrow

Maj. Gouverneur Hoes, U. S. Army, retired, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after a brief illness. He was 53.

MAJ. HOES

Major Hoes, son of the late Capt. Roswell Randall Hoes, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, was a great-great grandson of President James Monroe on his mother's side and a great nephew of President Martin Van Buren on his father's side.

A graduate of Princeton University in 1911, Major Hoes was associated with the American Security & Trust Co. for six years and during the First World War served as first lieutenant in the Army Air Corps service overseas. He attended Christ College, Oxford University and later became instructor of military tactics, R. O. T. C., New York University. He was retired after a tour of duty in the Hawaiian Islands.

Major Hoes was a member of the University Club, Sons of the Revolution and the Aztec Club. At the time of his death he was taking an active part on civilian defense and had loaned his home, 1410 Twentieth Street, as headquarters of the Zone E warden service, Dupont area.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Gourley Edwards Hoes, a brother, Laurence Gouverneur Hoes, a half-brother, Paul Hoes, a sister, Miss Isabel Dorrance Hoes and a nephew, Monroe Randall Hoes.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow from Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Funeral Today For Amelia Lechlider

Funeral services for Mrs. Amelia A. Lechlider, 88, widow of Charles E. Lechlider, who died Tuesday at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Lechlider, at Glen, will be at 10:30 a. m. today at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Rockville. The Rev. John W. Rosenberger, pastor of the Rockville Methodist Church, will officiate and burial will be in the cemetery at Colesville, Md.

Mrs. Lechlider was a native of Howard County, Md. She had lived in Montgomery County more than 50 years. She leaves three sons, Charles E. Lechlider, Colesville; Thomas L. Lechlider, Great Mills, Md., and Joseph R. Lechlider; 11 grandchildren, 27 great-grandchildren and 1 great-great-grandchild.

Sister M. Bertilde, Former Academy Head Here, Dies

Sister M. Bertilde, 91, former superior of the Holy Cross Academy here, died Sunday in St. Mary's Convent, Holy Cross, Ind., after a long illness, friends here learned last night. Funeral services and burial were held in Holy Cross yesterday.

Sister Bertilde, who was Sarah Walshe before entering the sisterhood, was born in Ireland. Prior to receiving her habit in 1883, following studies in South Bend, Ind., she was a public school teacher in Minnesota.

She was superior of the Holy Cross Academy here from 1913 until 1922 at which time she left for the convent of St. Mary-of-the-Wasatch, Salt Lake City, Utah, and later to the supervisorship of schools in the Midwest province of the Sisters of Holy Cross. She retired two years ago because of illness.

Sacks, Bank of Bethesda Head, Dies After Prolonged Illness

George P. Sacks, 70, president of the Bank of Bethesda, died yesterday of coronary thrombosis at his home, 101 Chevy Chase Drive, Chevy Chase, Md. He had been ill several months.

Born in Washington, Mr. Sacks attended public schools and a business college here. In 1894 he went into partnership with Arthur A. Chapin in a commission firm, Golden and Co., and 11 years later he and Mr. Chapin started an ice cream business with Mr. Sacks as vice president and chairman of the board of directors. Their firm, Chapin-Sacks Corp., was later sold to Southern Dairies.

Mr. Sacks had been connected with banking business as a member of various boards of directors and in 1921 he entered into it actively as president of the Bethesda Bank. He also was on the board of directors of the National Bank of Washington and Norfolk-Washington Steamship Co.

Mr. Sacks was the first president of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rotary Club and at the time of his death was an honorary president. He was past president of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce and was affiliated with Temple Noyes Masonic Lodge No. 32.

A widower, Mr. Sacks is survived by one son, George A. Sacks; a brother, Walter R. Sacks; a sister, Mrs. Henrietta S. Ellis, and two grandchildren, all of Bethesda.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Reuben Pumphrey funeral home, 7447 Wisconsin Avenue, Bethesda. Private burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Helen D. Hoskinson To Be Buried Today

The funeral of Helen Douglas Hoskinson, 82, who died at her home in Gaithersburg Tuesday after a long illness, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the funeral home of Ernest C. Gartner, Gaithersburg. The Rev. William J. Elliott, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, will conduct the services and burial will be in the cemetery at Darnestown.

Miss Hoskinson was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson and was virtually a lifelong resident of Montgomery County. She was the sister of Harry Hoskinson of Germantown and Washington.

W. G. Zimmerman Dies in Frederick

Frederick, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—William G. Zimmerman, 83, a retired banker, died at his home today after a long illness.

He was an official of the Citizens National Bank for 51 years, retiring in January, 1937. Zimmerman, the last member of the bank's original organization, became teller in 1886 and cashier in 1890. He held the latter post until his retirement.

He leaves his wife, two daughters, one brother and four sisters. Funeral services will be held Saturday.

Rain After Drought

It is doubly encouraging that after the bad buffeting our forces in Tunisia received at the hands of Marshal Rommel's Afrika-Korps last week they should have succeeded not only in holding their ground but also in driving the enemy back a good distance. But it must not be assumed from this report that the tide has now definitely turned in Tunisia. This would be wishful thinking of a particularly dangerous variety. We still have a long, hard fight ahead before the enemy has been dislodged from his last foothold in the African continent, and the losses we suffered in last week's fighting may have reduced our striking power for some time. On the other hand there is a distinct possibility that in attempting his drive toward the strategically important town of Thala, Rommel overreached himself and is now paying the price of his recklessness. So we may be vouchsafed time to strengthen our forces in Tunisia in preparation for the offensive, the failure of which to come off so far has disappointed many others besides Stalin.

It is an interesting and revealing circumstance in this connection that the Germans, desperate though they are for a victory to reestablish their self-esteem and prestige after the defeats they have suffered in Russia, have been very careful to avoid making any great claims in North Africa. It looks as though they were afraid to play up local successes in that theater out of fear that their rejoicing might prove premature. For the Germans know their own strength in Tunisia, know also the handicaps they are up against—in supplying their forces and in dispersing them over a far-flung area. The fact of the matter is that regardless of the events of last week, Axis operations in Tunisia from the first have been and are today a purely defensive affair capable of winning nothing for Germany and Italy except time.

This does not mean that the struggle is unimportant. On the contrary, it is very important, indeed, for the more time which the Axis wins in North Africa the better it will be able to strengthen the defenses along the "under-belly" of Europe and the western approaches. And the more the Nazis and Fascists consolidate themselves in the Bizerte-Tunis area, the longer it will take to dislodge them and the more costly the task will be. But the final outcome is hardly in doubt.

Spellman Mystery

It was inevitable that the suddenly announced journey to Europe of Archbishop Spellman should have let loose a storm of rumor concerning the purposes of his conferences with Pius XII at the Vatican. In peacetime it is usual enough for the heads of an important archdiocese to pay frequent visits to the Vatican. The case is different in wartime, though it has been pointed out that this is Msgr. Spellman's first visit since his consecration. Thus purely ecclesiastical affairs might offer a sufficient explanation of such a journey undertaken at some personal risk and in the midst of a great war which is approaching its climactic stage.

One rumor has been circulated that the Pope may have summoned Archbishop Spellman, now head of one of the most important sees in all Christendom, to the Vatican for the purpose of elevating him to cardinalatial rank. Ordinarily nominations to the College of Cardinals are made by the Pope to a Secret Consistory and announced shortly thereafter. However, in view of the disturbed condition of the world, there might be reason for withholding the announcement until just before the presentation of the rochet and red hat. It is also possible, though unusual, for a Pope to nominate cardinals in petto, that is, without divulging their identities to the consistory; but such an action, as we understand it, does not become official until the names are published.

But most of the current rumors attach a diplomatic significance to the Spellman mission. It is recalled that, unlike most other members of the American hierarchy, Archbishop Spellman is a trained professional diplomat, and that he served in the Papal Secretariat of State under Cardinal Pacelli, now Pope Pius XII. It is well known that he carried out brilliantly a difficult and important mission entrusted to him by the late Pope Pius XI. Thus it could be argued that Archbishop Spellman's name would logically suggest itself for any delicate diplomatic project in which the United States and the Vatican might be mutually interested. But if the archbishop's journey has any diplomatic significance, only a very few persons besides himself are in any position to know what that significance is, and these few can be trusted not to disclose it.

Nichols Bill

The Nichols bill setting up a separate standing committee of Congress on civil aviation will come before the House of Representatives today. We hope the members will vote against it. The following are our reasons:

1. It would add to the unwieldiness of congressional machinery. Already there are 80 standing committees, or little ministries, in existence. All plans for the smoother functioning of Congress begin with the proposal that there should be fewer committees, not more. Consolidation would simplify and facilitate the work of Congress. New committees with a single field of reference breed legislative anarchy and lobbying.

2. It would waste the time of the administrative chiefs in the executive branch of Government. A committee on aviation would be another testimony-collecting group. Already our war administrators have to go from committee to committee giving the same evidence. It is a scandalous drag on the war effort. In peacetime the practice impairs the efficiency of Government.

3. It would injure the cause and retard the development of civil aviation. The new group would be inexperienced and would offer the temptation to make political capital out of civil aviation. In place of a wise policy based on integrating aviation into the complex of transportation in general, we should have a body of special pleaders.

4. It would bring to an end the usefulness of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to transport in general and aviation in particular. For 20 years this committee has regulated air transport in common with rival forms of transport. That is the best way to regulate it. Some committee must be umpire for competing forms of transport, or the job will be thrown on Congress, since separate committees would concern themselves with pushing their particular interests. The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has been acclaimed by the aviation industry itself for its judicial impartiality. This committee has watched over and guided the progress of civil aviation in this country to its preeminent position today. It sponsored the Air Commerce Act of 1926 and the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. It has a very capable standing subcommittee on civil aviation of which Representative Bulwinkle of North Carolina is chairman. Membership includes Representatives Lea, Boren, Wolverton and Holmes. All of them are well known to the aviation industry as active and aggressive in their desire to further the sound development of civil aviation. Divorced from aviation, the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce might become a special pleader for railroads and buses.

Stalin's Statement

No one who is in the slightest degree aware of present-day realities would seek to rob the Red army of one iota of the vast credit it deserves for its valiant stand against Hitler's invading hordes. Hence the warm encomiums handed out by Joseph Stalin to that magnificent fighting force on the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding will find a strong echo in every Allied land. Nonetheless, it was a little less than gracious on Stalin's part, and a little less than accurate, for him to state flatly that: "The Red army alone is bearing the whole weight of the war." This is to ignore the not inconsiderable supplies, including more than 5000 planes and 5600 tanks, which this country and Great Britain between them have sent to the Soviet Union. It is to ignore the seriously disruptive effects on German industry and transportation of the continuous Allied air raids on the Rhineland and elsewhere in the Reich. And it is to ignore Anglo-American efforts in North Africa to which the Germans have diverted no small part of the Luftwaffe and a part, though admittedly by no means a major part, of their land forces.

Premier Stalin, like many Americans and Englishmen, is no doubt disappointed in the African venture so far. It is certainly true that that venture has so far got nowhere, while in the same time the Red army has succeeded in regaining practically all of the territory lost to Germany in 1942 and some of the territory lost in 1941. But what Stalin says of the Red army is equally applicable to the American forces in North Africa. "The Red army," says the Soviet Premier, "in the first period of the war naturally had not yet had nor could have had such military experience (as the Germans). It was here that the German fascist army had the advantage. In 20 months the situation, however, has changed in this sphere as well. In the course of the war, the Red army has become a seasoned army. It has learned to smite the enemy for certain . . ."

Given the experience, which cannot be acquired except in actual combat, and we have every reason to believe the American forces in North Africa will give an extremely good account of themselves. The enemy will be driven out of Tunisia, Europe will be invaded, and Germany will be placed between the hammer of the Red army and the anvil of an Anglo-American invasion force. It is true that, in the meantime, the Red army is bearing the brunt of the load in the war against the Nazis. But the Red army is not carrying the entire load, and Stalin contributed nothing to Anglo-Russian-American harmony by insisting that it is.

Hold Your Hats, Boys!

Every man who pays the least attention to dress is probably shuddering at the report from London that British civilians may lose vest, collar and tie at one fell swoop through the fortunes of war. London has long dictated styles for men. Who, therefore, can tell what repercussions such a move would have on those chesty, square-jawed manikins in American clothing-store windows?

In order to save material, a standardized two-piece suit, without vest, collar or tie, known as a "battledress," is being considered for civilians by the British Board of Trade, which controls the distribution of ration coupons for clothing. However, the matter is being approached cautiously. For the public may balk at such complete regimentation of men and boys. Certainly plenty of opposition may be expected since men are as great foes of innovations in dress as women are lovers of it. The fact that Joseph Stalin wears a two-piece outfit without collar or tie is not expected to help the popularity of the "battledress" among the monocled patrons of London's Saville Row. Or, in view of the popularity of Russia in Britain, is it?

At any rate, if such an outfit should be adopted even temporarily, who can tell what permanent influence might come out of it? Perhaps men would at last be emancipated from the uncomfortable collars from which dress reformers have long sought to free them. Perhaps the vest would be propelled further toward oblivion. Perhaps looser trousers would aid men's grace, ease and activity. Fashion historians point out that there has not been any fundamental change in men's fashions since the adoption of long trousers more than 100 years ago. They also show that the trend toward simplicity and conformity in men's clothes has been growing stronger with the elimination of class distinctions and the growth of democracy. Aristocrats formerly forced standardized dress on the masses. Now that business and political leaders must have public approval, their hallmark of solidity and success is conservative and uniform dress. The masses today are the dictators of men's fashions.

So perhaps there are subtle social forces back of the "battledress" that will inevitably bring further changes in men's attire, and that will make the suave clubman of Trafalgar Square and Fifth Avenue unwitting symbols of the rise of the man in jumper and overalls.

WINS Take Over

She is not on a 48-hour week. Hers is a seven-day round-the-clock job. She works alone without the stimulus of companionship. She wears no uniform, no insignia. She gets no citations, no medals, no pay check. But at last she has been given a name. She is a WIN. By bestowing this title on the American housewife and making her an official part of the mobilization for war, the Office of Civilian Defense has given homemaking a recognition that may affect its status permanently.

Many women leaders have long contended that active homemakers should be classed as producers just as if they were in offices or factories, and rewarded on the same definite basis. Now, thanks to the efforts of a national magazine, the Government has officially recognized homemakers as producers in the war effort. And the WINS have come to join the WAACS, the WAVES and the WAFS. And who knows but what more definite hours and more definite rewards for the sun-to-sun vocation of housewifery may eventually grow out of such action?

No group is more vital to the winning of the war just now than the 20 million prospective WINS. They are the ones who must cushion the impact of food rationing, who must see that Americans are kept fit and healthy and gastronomically satisfied despite the decrease in food supplies. They must be the chief conservators of war materials, as fats and tin cans, and also of home goods, as clothes, house furnishings, electric equipment. They must function as doctors, nurses, plumbers, electricians, dry cleaners, launderers, delivery boys to save manpower, rubber and gasoline. In addition, they must be the chief morale builders of the Nation, sustaining their menfolk by their cheer and hope, adjusting their children to a world of war, and training them for a world of tomorrow, and keeping, as far as possible, life functioning as usual so that the "home" which absent men dream of will be awaiting them on their return.

This is a large order. But American housewives are meeting it valiantly. It is something that their efforts are being recognized officially and that they have been given a name and program, even without benefit of pay check.

TO A DEAD HORSE

Now, Falada, fly!
Beat your hooves on the sky!
Oblivious of motorcars,
Go browse among the windy stars:
Nuzzle the moon awry!
Invincible and free,
Escape from earth and me:
Warm your flank against the sun:
Hurdle rainbows on the run:
Snort eternity!
Drink from fountains of the rain:
Scatter clouds with your flashing mane:
Kick the thunder down!
Then, wearied but elate,
Whinny at Heaven's gate!

Beware Of Hastings

By Leopold Kohr

Hitler, The Symbolist

By his admirers, as well as by his enemies, Hitler is called a master of surprise. In reality, he is no surprise to anyone but to his talented analysts who, because they could not foresee his actions, declared him a genius. But Hitler is not a genius. He believes in symbols, and being a symbolist, he is as open to accurate prediction as the superstitious woman who goes to the doctor only on Thursdays and travels to town only on Fridays.

To understand this basic character trait of Hitler one has only to contemplate his past actions without the desire of the learned to find for every one of them an economic, statistic or strategic reason. When he invaded Austria he made his personal entry into the country at Braunau on the Inn River. Braunau happened to be the place in which he was born as the son of an unimportant customs official. Braunau should now witness the birth of a world conqueror. The blessing it once gave to the future master of Germany he now solicited for the future master of the world. This symbolic act achieved, Hitler continued on his journey, never again to come back to the place of his birth.

Attacks Enemy Emotions

Arriving at Vienna, he did not occupy the chancellery as the new master of an old country, he took a suite at the Hotel Imperial. The Austrian state never had meant anything to him. So he ordered, as another one of his symbolic actions, the beautiful fence torn down that surrounded the residence of the Emperors. But from the doors of the Hotel Imperial he had cleared the snow away while the rich of his time passed him in the glitter of their uniforms. Thus, this magnificent hotel had a meaning for him, and it was there where he wanted to live.

After the defeat of the French armies it was only natural that he concluded the armistice in the railway carriage of Compiegne. Had he won this war, we would by now have another "Treaty of Versailles." More symbolically significant than Compiegne, however, was the break-through of the German armies at Sedan. The strategists explained the choice of this town with the fact that the Maginot Line had there its weakest spot. In reality, the Maginot Line was as strong at Sedan as anywhere else.

But Sedan was, since the Franco-Prussian War of 1871, the name of one of the greatest German triumphs and one of the worst French defeats, and Hitler calculated rightly that the renewed projection into actuality of that historic name would re-create also all its sinister implications. Nothing, indeed, could have been a greater moral shock to the French than their nightmarish confrontation with the hollow sound of the name of Sedan, where not the fortifications of France, but the soul of France, had its most vulnerable point.

Also throughout his Russian campaign we can follow Hitler's design to hit the enemy where he is emotionally most exposed. Knowing what Stalin is to the Russians, he took particular pains to capture places bearing the Red dictator's name. But none of them was of the importance or significance of Stalingrad, the fortress of Stalin, which to conquer the Nazi war lord wasted all of his stubbornness and pride, and most of his power.

Nevertheless, all these instances would now, in their historic perspective, be of no great interest were it not for the reason that they give a valuable clue to Hitler's future designs, so often called secret or unpredictable. As the tide in Russia turns against him, he will, like the persecuted fugitive, again try his luck in the opposite direction. As he thought to end the war in 1941 by suddenly turning against Russia, where he hoped for a quick victory and a secure back, he will now attempt it the other way. He will fall back on his postponed plan to invade England, in a final desperate effort to break his self-created encirclement. In fact, he will attempt the invasion because he must . . . Being at war with England, the only way to conquer her is to invade her.

Plan for Invasion

Not only the "must" of the invasion is obvious, however. Also the "where" is easily predictable with his preference for symbols. He will make his most concentrated effort of landing troops at Hastings, which is to England what Sedan was to France. It was there that the last invasion of England succeeded in 1066 A. D. It is there where Hitler hopes, in 1943, to create the first serious shock for England's morale, by filling the ears of the people with the ominous name of Hastings.

Such is Hitler. Beware of Hastings. Little psychological tricks of this kind may sometimes have tremendous consequences. Beware of Hastings, the more as Hitler very carefully never gives that place a chance to get into the headlines now. He keeps the name on ice till the moment when he can issue the first communique with the thundering historic name of that invasion spelling city of Hastings. And the time is at hand. The Allies are threatening with a huge push against him. And the best defense is, as we all know and as Hitler knows, attack.

Also the Allies, for their coming offensive, could to their advantage play a few psychological tricks with Hitler's own weakness. One would be to name their strongest fortified points at the front Churchillborough or Rooseveltgrad. With the certainty of a law of nature Hitler would, at once, throw all his might into a battle for such valuable symbolic names. But as the Allies would be the ones to choose their strong points, this would provide them with an easy method of channeling Hitler's best troops straight into the underworld.

Such a man is Hitler. Did he not follow from town to town Mrs. Roosevelt with his bombers when she recently visited England? How easy sometimes it would really be to deal with that military phenomenon for which Hitler is taken by his learned, economical, statistical, and strategical analysts.

What Russia Wants

By Barnet Nover

Stalin's Order Of The Day

IN HIS REMARKABLE order of the day issued on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Red army, Josef Stalin made a number of statements which have produced a violent fluttering in Allied dovecotes.

In the first place, he pointedly revived the second front issue which has been dormant since November 7, when American and British forces landed in Morocco and Algeria. "In view of the absence of a second front in Europe," he said, "the Red army alone is bearing the whole weight of the war."

Secondly, he hinted strongly that Russia will not go back to its 1920 frontiers in Europe but will insist, in greater or lesser measure, on a restoration of the status quo as of June 22, 1941, when Russia was in possession of the Baltic republics, a slice of post-Versailles Finland, a large chunk of Poland and the former Rumanian territories of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina.

"We have begun the liberation of the Soviet Ukraine from German possession," he said, "but millions of Ukrainians are still languishing under the yoke of the German enslavers. In Byelorussia, Lithuania, Latvia, Esthonia, in Moldavia, in Crimea, in Karelia, German invaders and their accomplices still hold sway."

Thirdly, Stalin played variations on the theme that the Red army's objective is to drive the Germans out of Russian territory and said nothing about pursuing the enemy any further.

THE SURPRISING thing about Stalin's order of the day is not what it contained, however, but that its remarks should have occasioned any surprise. For with slight exceptions it is all of a piece with what he has said on other occasions in the past.

It is true that after November 7 second front agitation in Russia and by Russia subsided. It is impossible to estimate the effect of that Allied diversionary move on the military balance of power in the Russian theater. That it had some effect and that this effect was unfavorable to Germany and favorable to Russia cannot, however, be doubted.

On the other hand, the Anglo-American venture in North Africa has obviously not been followed, as Stalin may have expected, by the speedy elimination of the last Axis stronghold south of the Mediterranean and the opening of an Allied second front in Europe.

Stalin's order of the day must, therefore, be regarded as an expression both of his disappointment over North African military developments and of his alarms that the Allied failure in Tunisia may give Germany time to establish a strong defensive position.

However, there is nothing in the revived second front controversy which a second front cannot cure.

IN THE MATTER of Russia's postwar boundaries the issue is far more complicated and far less likely to be straightened out by the inexorable march of events.

What is involved in this issue is nothing less than the future organization of the world. On this issue Stalin is taking no chances on being caught short. Many who have spoken to him during the past year and a half have come away convinced that he is prepared to lead Russia into a cooperative peace system. That alone could give Russia that period of recuperation she will desperately need after the bloodletting and destruction of this war. But there is no assurance that such a system will actually come into being. So, as an alternative, Russia is preparing to defend her frontiers through the acquisition—or reacquisition—of buffer areas.

This is actually no new aim. On July 3, 1941, less than two weeks after the German assault on Russia, Stalin cited among "the free people of the Soviet Union," which Hitler was seeking to enslave, not only Russians, Ukrainians, Byelorussians, Georgians, Armenians, Azerbaijanians, Uzbeks and Tartars but also Lithuanians, Letts, Esthonians and Moldavians.

And on May 1, 1942, he declared: "Our aim is clear and noble. We want to liberate our Soviet land from the German fascist scoundrels. We want to liberate our brothers, the Ukrainians, Moldavians, Byelorussians, Lithuanians, Letts, Esthonians and Karelians . . ."

In all past pronouncements, as in Tuesday's order of the day, Stalin also insisted that Russia's war aims did not include the conquest of foreign peoples.

THE ORDER of the day was vague on the subject of what Russia proposed to do once Russian territory has been freed of the invader. A similar vagueness has characterized most other statements on war aims which have emanated from the Kremlin. On one occasion, however, Stalin did go further. On November 6, 1941, he declared:

"Unlike Hitlerite Germany, the Soviet Union and its Allies are waging a war for liberation—a just war for the liberation of the enslaved peoples of Europe and the U. S. S. R. from Hitler's tyranny . . .

"We have not nor can we have such war aims as the imposition of our will and our regime on the Slavic and other enslaved peoples of Europe who are waiting for our help. Our aim is to help these peoples in their struggle for liberation from Hitler's tyranny . . .

"Russia's first aim is to free her own territory, and the second aim is to free the enslaved peoples of Europe and then allow them to decide their own fate without any outside interference in their internal affairs."

With this statement Stalin put himself categorically on record against transforming what has been a war of liberation into a war of aggression.

The fate of Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania falls into the twilight zone between the two. That twilight zone is the area of maneuver which Russia is allowing herself pending the settlement of the question of the kind of world we are going to have after the war. And the answer to that question will depend as much on what we do as what the Russians do.

That Boondoggle Canal

Do Congressmen realize:

That advocates of the discredited North Florida Canal are again straining every nerve to slip through an appropriation for it, by fair means or foul?

That, already dug, there is a canal across the peninsula which, right now, can move over 160,000 barrels of oil per day for the relief of the Eastern Seaboard? That, at slight cost in time and money for the elimination of shallows, capacity of said canal could be greatly increased?

That, according to United States engineers, the proposed new boondoggle in north Florida would take at least three years to build at enormous expense?

That the best authorities believe it would constitute a grave menace to the water resources of central Florida?

That Washington authorities, though they know that use of the existing canal would do much to relieve oil shortage in Eastern States, are doing little or nothing about it.

Voting And Victory

The victory of World War I, either through ignorance, indifference, or greed, was sadly misunderstood by both the rulers and the ruled of the democratic nations. It is one matter to say that we are fighting to make the world safe for democracy and another matter to establish a world order to regulate the social and economic structure so as to make the world safe for democracy after victory.

To make the world safe for democracy, there is a matter of learning the difference between hypocrisy and democracy. To make the world safe for democracy requires more than lip service, or fancy phrases; it requires honesty and sincerity and the determination to call a spade a spade. Many of our people, I regret to say, seem to think that the only thing necessary to make the world safe for democracy is victory and security for British sea power and our own.

To fail to make a world order extend to all points—north, east, south and west—or fail to defend it by force if it is threatened, simply means, as it did in World War I, that victory will be delayed to a third or fourth world war, or more, until justice and equality prevail in the social and economic structure of the world.

Already, to put victory beyond realization, and to disillusion, frustrate, as well as confuse the American people, there are those who, as the next national election draws nearer, will do, or say anything which they think may usher in another Administration whose views and ideals are contrary to those of the present Administration. I would caution the American people not to repeat the same mistake of 1920 by voting out the present Administration for one not in sympathy with the ideals for which we are fighting. Regardless of what the Republican leaders think and say, there is no possible way—the American people should be told and retold—in which we can repudiate or avoid our economic commitments after victory, without becoming involved in a future war.

The Shortages

A is for alcohol; now only subs
Can be obtained for your alcoho rubs.
B's for bananas and also for butter,
Neither of which will your pantry now clutter.

* * * *

C is for coffee, corsets and cream—
Trying to get 'em requires a scheme.
D is for dog foods which any one's pup
Sadly will tell you ain't keeping him up.

* * * *

E is for (you know—you turn on the switch)
Toasters, ice boxes and cleaners and sich.
F is for feathers, a war need, of course
(You can keep yours if they came off a horse).
Also for flashlights and fishing rods, too . . .
Now just a worm on your finger must do!

* * * *

G is for gas which some people recall
(Some sort of liquid not seen since last fall);
Also for golf balls. Remember the time
When if you lost one it wasn't a crime?

* * * *

H is for hems. If they go any higher
What will become of milady's attire?
I is for iron, now gone with a thud—
(Any you keep has to be in your blood).
J is for jars and for jackets and jute,
Hard to obtain if you're not quite astute;
K is for knives of which there's such a lack Second-hand ones now are stuck in your back.

* * * *

L is for lawn mowers industry gave
Just to give Adolf a haircut and shave.
M is for metal; no matter how much you
Like it, remember no metal should touch you.
N is for noodles, once used in soup
Just before soup, too, was knocked for a loop.

* * * *

O is for oil, now the rarest of fuels,
Easily got by just hocking your jewels.
P is for plastics. I understand now
Plastic steaks may be obtained from a cow.
Q is for quinine, once good for a cold—
You'll catch one hunting a store where it's sold.

* * * *

R is for rubber. I once had a bit—
That was before my car ran out of it.
S is for sugar and sauces and soups,
Needed by nobody more than the troops.
T is for tin; I remember the day
We could just keep it or toss it away.

* * * *

U's for utensils and V is for vases,
W's wool in most curious places.
X marks the spot where a person once said
"Wrap me up that" (and took nothing instead).

* * * *

Y is for yachts; now the boys have no chance
Even to get a white hat or white pants.
Z is for zither. There's one in the store—
Nevertheless I would much prefer war!

Uniforms for Women

The editorial, "Women at Work," which appeared in your newspaper on February 17, has been called to my attention, and I want to assure you that the Women's Industrial Production Services, popularly called "the WIPS" will give it the widest possible publicity and quotation.

As you may already be aware, our organization is basically designed to promote industrial safety for the women who actually work at the benches and in the shops, but emphasizes the necessity for safe "on the job" uniforms by the stimulation of the wearing of our official "off the job" uniform, not only by the women workers at the benches but also by those in the offices of large industrial organizations throughout the country.

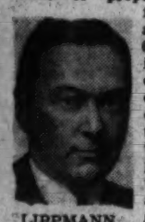
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mirror Of The Spirit

THERE IS no better or more practical rule in what it is now the fashion to call public relations or propaganda than a famous remark attributed to George Washington. During one of the most difficult periods of the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia, when the whole project of a strong national government hung in the balance because of pressure from the smaller States, Washington asked the delegates to disregard what was supposed to be expedient and to "raise a standard to which the wise and the honest can repair."



LIPPMANN

Like most, I had always admired this slogan, but had regarded it as one of those noble and pious generalities which are said by the immortal great, and are too rarefied for our own affairs. Then one day last autumn I happened to be talking with a friend of mine who is the editor of a London newspaper about how the people of London had taken the bombing raids. "Many of us," he said, "were anxious about that before the raids started in September, 1940; we did not know how the people of a modern city would stand up to it. And when the first raid came, and hit the East End of London, neither the Government nor the newspapers knew just what the people who had been hit were thinking and how they would take it. But that evening we decided to assume that they had acted heroically, as Englishmen should, and the next morning we printed all the stories that came in to us of their bravery, their good humor, and their uncomplaining patience. Right then and there we fixed the pattern of how people ought to behave in an air raid. Perhaps they would all have behaved that way anyway. But you know there is good and bad in all of us, and the right example at the right moment can make all the difference in the way men act."

Then I understood as never before what it means in practice to raise a standard—a standard of behavior—to which the wise and the honest can repair.

WE IN particular need to meditate upon the wisdom of this truth about human affairs. For the conditions under which Americans have to fight this war are morally very difficult. Our men are fighting across the seas while the Nation at home is immune from the risks of battle. This separation is our chief moral problem. For the men who are abroad in dangerous places or in lonely posts, there is little chance as there is in England or in Russia or in China to come home on leave, or to be sustained by the feeling that near them and all about them there is the warmth of those they love and the reassuring familiarity of their native land. The ordeal of the American warrior is the ordeal of loneliness and of distance, and the dread that he is far away and forgotten and that his hard task is not understood.

For the people at home, who never feel the blows of the enemy, it is not easy to feel themselves close to and part of the great undertaking in which their sons and their lovers are engaged. Many, but by no means all of the people at home, are living through the ordeal of loneliness and of distance and of anxiety, and finally for some there is only their loss and their grief. For all those who have a poignant personal stake in the distant enterprise, the ordeal is harder because of the distance. They do not expect to see their men until the war is over. They wait for letters that do not come very often. And because they are so safe themselves, they feel all the more separated because they are unable to have the supreme consolation of sharing in some measure at least the tasks of their men.

THE REST, and they are still the great majority, who are safe at home and have no man at the front, do not find it easy to keep themselves vividly aware of what this war demands of them. They are the ones who get themselves most involved in the trivialities of the inconveniences of wartime, who make a spectacle of themselves snatching for profits and wages, and insisting upon their prerogatives and worrying about how much they can withhold now in order to have a better start than others when the war is over.

It is to them that Washington's injunction to raise a standard is most relevant. They are the people who are not living in the history of their age, and do not imagine it, and tend, therefore not to rise to the level of it.

THE MECHANICS of politics and of the press tends, if it is not consciously and resolutely reversed, to depress rather than to raise their spirits. Every Congressman and every newspaperman is like a doctor: he spends most of his time hearing from the people who have a pain, and if he is not on guard, he is likely to think that the country consists entirely of people with a pain in the neck. He forgets how many people there are who do not have a pain in the neck, or are disposed to grin and bear it if they have. That is why objective sampling of opinion, as in the Gallup and Fortune polls, has so consistently shown that the American people are saner, more resolute, and more enlightened than they are supposed to be.

The tendency of the elected representative, however, is to take the quiet mass of his constituents for granted and to worry about the ones who write him the strongest letters about their pains in their necks. These are the people he tends to represent, and by representing them their attitude tends to become the standard which is raised. Hearing so much from Congress about pains in the neck, the rest begin to discover that they too have pains in the neck.

The ordinary mechanism of news reporting has a similar tendency. The 10 per cent or so of the chiselers, operators on the black market, hand-wringers and breast-beaters, precisely because they are out of the ordinary, have to be reported as news. Undoubtedly it is the business of a free press to make public what goes wrong. But somehow we have to keep in mind the fact that the behavior of the wise and the honest is not to be ignored and taken for granted, that it must be reported and celebrated, and set high and conspicuously as the standard and example. If not, we shall be getting too low an opinion of ourselves, and shall be lowering our behavior to conform to our opinions.

NOR WILL this raising of the standard be a departure from the truth. For the truth about America today is that, with all our mistakes and shortcomings, by the manner in which the Nation is responding to this difficult war the people are writing one of the great chapters in American history. No one should rob them of their right to find strength in being proud of it. No one should deny them the mirror in which they may see themselves as a grateful posterity will see them.

Canal Repair Advocated

Extra Water Supply

A grant of $140,000 to repair flood damage to the historic old Chesapeake & Ohio Barge Canal was recommended to the House yesterday as part of a six billion dollar deficiency bill on which the House starts work today.

The flood of October 17 severely damaged the Little Falls feeder lock and completely washed out the towpath at several points between Locks 4 and 5, A. E. Demeray, associate director of the National Park Service, told the committee. He said that as a result of this damage it was not possible to maintain a flow of water in the canal between Little Falls and Georgetown.

Demeray explained that this section of the canal provides a secondary source of water supply for Washington. The United States Engineer's Office has installed an emergency pumping station on C. and O. property below the Delecarlia Reservoir, the committee was informed, so that if the Washington conduit were bombed or otherwise disrupted, water could be supplied the reservoir from the canal.

"If we do not repair the canal," Demeray said, "there will be no water in the canal in the event of an emergency."

He also warned there was a bad sanitary condition along the canal at the present time, with pools of stagnant water left to become mosquito-breeders.

Included in the $40,000 was an $30,000 item to repair flood damage done in East Potomac, West Potomac and Anacostia Parks. Unless tile drains are cleaned and the surface repaired, mosquito-breeding pools will be a health menace in those parks, Demeray asserted.

The canal furnished power for a paper mill and a flour mill in Georgetown, from which the Government received an annual revenue of $27,000, the committee was informed. When the flood stopped that source of power, it was explained, the Potomac Electric Power Co. put in special transformers to furnish the mills power, but the costs to the mills is now nearly twice as high, Demeray said, and they are anxious to continue service from canal power.

Demeray told the committee that as a result of the change in the power system the mills are operated at only two-thirds capacity.

Repairs are necessary from Georgetown to Little Falls, Demeray said, a distance of 6 miles.

In the bill $57,585 was allotted to the United States Engineers hydro plant at Georgetown; $32,010 to repairs from the hydro plant to Lock 5, and $20,405 for repairs to Dam No. 1 at Little Falls.

Also included in the deficiency bill was a grant of $8320 to the District of Columbia to be used by the Office of Collector of Taxes.

Finland Offered 2 Powers Peace, London Hears

London, Feb. 24 (INS).—A definite peace offer to Britain and Russia was made by Finland through Swedish intermediaries last month, the London Evening Standard said today.

The offer, said the newspaper, listed four conditions necessary before Finland would stop fighting. They were said to be, first, full recognition of Finnish independence; second, establishment of "honorable" frontiers between Russia and Finland; third, departure of seven German divisions now maintained in Finland, and, fourth, American and Swedish guarantees of any peace treaty formulated.

Newspaper Labor Panel Is Set Up

The War Labor Board yesterday set up a six-man panel to consider wage adjustments and labor disputes in the daily newspaper industry.

The public members of the panel will be the chairman, Robert K. Burns, chairman of the Sixth Regional War Labor Board, and the vice chairman, Prof. F. S. Deibler, professor of economics and history in Northwestern University.

Labor members are Milton Murray, Detroit, president of the American Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.), and C. V. Ernest, representative of the International Pressmens and Assistants Union (A. F. L.).

Employer members are John S. McCarrens, general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and James E. Chappel, president of the Birmingham, (Ala.) Age Herald.

About a dozen alternate employer and labor members were appointed.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 44
Date of Filing

Income-tax returns of citizens and residents of the United States are required by law to be made on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the taxable year, which for most individuals is the calendar year. Accordingly, returns for the calendar year 1942 must be filed not later than midnight of Monday, March 15, 1943.

Returns by nonresident alien individuals must be made on or before the 15th day of the sixth month after the close of the fiscal year, or on or before June 15, 1943, for the calendar year 1942.

If placed in the mail, the returns should be posted in ample time to reach the collector's office, under ordinary handling of the mails, on or before the due date. The envelope should bear proper postage and be addressed to the "Collector of Internal Revenue" at the correct address in the district where the taxpayer's legal residence or principal place of business is located. If he has neither, the return should be mailed to the Collector of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Md.

Persons in the military and naval service outside the United States, or on sea duty, and persons in enemy-occupied or besieged territory are granted an extension to file, without penalty, up to the 15th day of the third month from the close of the war or their return to the United States. Also, persons who during any period of time after December 6, 1941, have been continuously outside the Americas for more than 90 days are allowed an extension of time in which to file returns, and make payment of tax, amounting to the period of such absence plus 90 days.

Lend-Lease Act Extension Clears Its First Hurdle

The House Foreign Affairs Committee unanimously approved yesterday a measure extending for one year the Lend-Lease Act—mutual-aid supply line between this Nation and its war partners.

The action was announced by a committee attache who said there was no amendment to the bill continuing the life of the act until July, 1944.

It followed three weeks of hearings, during which several amendments were suggested, one of which would have sought to secure American interests in foreign airfields for postwar civilian use.

Agency Lists Warworkers' Housing Rules

Rents and occupancy eligibility for 3721 living units in three Government warworkers' housing projects—McLean Gardens, Naylor Gardens and Fairlinton—slated to be completed next month, were announced yesterday by the Federal Public Housing Authority.

Top rental is $89.50 per month, and lowest rental is 58.50. Included in rent is heating, hot and cold water and electricity for lighting, cooking and refrigeration.

Occupancy eligibility in these projects is limited to persons and families who have arrived in Washington within the last year and who reside in temporary, makeshift quarters, or who have been forced to move through no fault of their own, or live beyond reasonable commuting distance, it was said. There are no minimum or maximum income limitations on occupancy eligibility.

A prospective resident of one of the developments, after receiving certification from his respective government agency certifying officer, should file his accredited application with the Defense Homes Corporation at 200 Longfellow Building, M Street and Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Following are the locations and rentals of the three projects, all permanent structures: McLean Gardens, Wisconsin Avenue and Porter Street Northwest, 720 units, available in March for family dwellers only, dormitory units will be completed some time later; 2½, 3½ and 4½-room apartments, with rentals from $60 to $87.50.

Naylor Gardens, Naylor Road and Thirtieth Street Southeast: Will have 748 apartments when fully completed, of which 206 are expected to be available by April 1; 3½, 4½ and 5½-room apartments, with rents from $59.50 to $78.50 per month.

Fairlington, Seminary Road, Arlington, Va., will have 2253 units of which some 350 units will be available within a few weeks; 3½, 4½ and 5½-room apartments, with rents from $58.50 to $89.50 per month.

Conference Program

The senior group of the Maj. Charles M. Stedman chapter, Children of the Confederacy, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont Avenue Northwest, to commemorate the birthdays of four notable Americans: Washington, Lincoln, General Stuart and Sidney Lanier.

Contributions paid to certain organizations are deductible.

Columbia Basin Bill

Measure Passes House

By the Associated Press

The House yesterday passed the Columbia Basin antispeculation bill (H. R. 39), designed to protect settlers on the 1,200,000-acre Washington State project from inflationary values on the project lands.

The lone objector was Representative Smith (Republican) of Ohio, who had protested that certain provisions of the bill constituted a "limited paternalism."

More than a dozen members from the Far West, many making their first speeches in the House, spoke for the bill in the course of the two-hour debate, marshaled by Representative Rockwell (Republican) of Colorado and Representative White (Democrat) of Idaho, chairman of the Reclamation and Irrigation Committee, which unanimously approved the bill.

Chief features of the bill, Rockwell said, are its limitation of individual holdings to a maximum of 160 acres; limitation of the price of lands within the project to their present appraised value and the freezing of that value for five years after water is placed on the land. The project, he explained, is not to be developed until after hte war, when it is hoped that it will provide farm homes for many returned soldiers.

Representative Robinson (Democrat), Utah, described the project as the largest ever attempted by the Federal Government. He said $160,000,000 already had been expended on the dams which will impound water not only for the irrigation of this tract but also for power. He told the House no appropriation is carried by the bill and none will be needed for two years. The price limitation, he said, is based upon the "dry-land value" of the acreage which he estimated at from $5 to $30 an acre. With water, he explained the land may be worth up to $1000 an acre.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, expressed fear that the purpose of the development was to subsidize farmers at the expense of the power users but was assured by Robinson that no power was to be sold for irrigation purposes but the settlement of the tract would provide a market for industries and activities which would use "every kilowatt produced at Grand Coulee Dam."

Ninety-eight per cent of the Government's reclamation expenditures have been repaid in the past, Representative O'Connor (Democrat), Montana, told the House, assuring the members that any expenditures made by the Government on this project would be repaid by the settlers.

Representative Burdick (Republican), North Dakota, said the project would "make sure of jobs for the boys returning" from the present war.

Things that make GREYHOUND a great public service

. . . also make it a great force for Victory!

The very same features that made Greyhound one of the world's greatest passenger-carriers have also made it ready and able to do a hugely expanded, essential wartime job. Today Greyhound is working at that job full-time, full-strength—carrying the millions who are fighting, working, supporting the war effort.

ECONOMY..
Greyhound pioneered travel economy — and today makes an even more important saving — using only a fraction as much rubber and fuel per passenger, per mile, as do private autos.

CONVENIENCE...
Frequency of schedules is now more important than ever—saving precious time, permitting the planning of trips for hours and days when travel will aid the war effort most.

NATIONWIDE COVERAGE...
Serving nearly all of the U. S. A. along 65,000 miles of highways, Greyhound reaches directly more military centers and war-vital places than any other transportation system.

COMFORT..
Wartime passengers cheerfully accept a little less comfort and convenience than Greyhound offered in peacetime — knowing well that greater travel luxury than ever will come with Victory.

Bucky Harris Signed as Manager of Phillies

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When Bill Cox, the intrepid young millionaire, who bought the Phils, announced yesterday that his choice as the team's new manager was Bucky Harris, it was no staggering surprise to baseball men. There were powerful factors in Harris' favor.

POVICH

The lack of enthusiasm for Harris in Washington in recent years wasn't shared around the league generally. Outside of Washington, Harris was rated as quite a guy with a ball club, even when his teams were far down in the second division.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees stomped all over a critic of Harris' last September when the failure of the Nats to finish better than seventh was a topic. "Don't blame Bucky Harris for that," said McCarthy. "He turned in one of the great managerial jobs in the league. I don't know how he kept that Washington outfit of his out of the cellar. Man for man, the Nats were ten games worse than the worst club in the league."

For a fellow who was jobless after finishing in seventh place last season, Harris apparently rated highly when a managerial job opened up. The post with the Phils wasn't the only one he was offered. Branch Rickey wanted him to manage the Brooklyn Dodgers after Leo Durocher's draft status moved him from the Brooklyn scene. Harris was scheduled to confer with Rickey after the latter's return from the coast, but decided to cast his lot with the Phils.

"That may seem funny, taking a job with the Phils when I had a chance to go with the Dodgers," said Harris, "but there were many circumstances to consider. I found Mr. Cox to be a charming sort of fellow whose ideas about building up a baseball club were much like my own. I want to make a fresh start with him, and the Phils are not in such a bad spot. The war has sort of equalized things. A tail-end club of last year can be up there next season."

Harris was the favorite to end up as the Phils' manager from the way Cox paid more than $325,000 for the club. Frankly admitting that he was a green pea at the baseball business, Cox sought advice from friends in baseball on choosing a manager. Into his ears was dinned continuous praise of Harris. The New York baseball press plumped for Bucky. Within 10 hours after Cox bought the franchise, he asked Harris to New York to discuss the job.

Not the least factor in Harris' favor was the fact that he had been Clark Griffith's manager for 12 years. As one baseball man put it, "if you can work that long for Griffith as a manager, you are slightly terrific. You've got to have a lot on the ball.

"Managing for Griffith is different from managing anybody else's club. Griffith knows so much baseball that no manager can fool him. A fellow managing another club might walk into the owner's office after losing a tough game and get away with an easy alibi, but Griffith's manager can't. Harris couldn't explain away defeats by saying, for example, that 'Joe Dokes can't go to his right.' Another club-owner might be taken in, but not Griff. If Griffith was satisfied with Harris for 12 years, that's a compliment to Bucky."

In April, Harris will be starting his twentieth consecutive year as a big league manager. In length of successive service he is second only to Connie Mack. His managerial career began on a January day in 1924 when the telephone rang in his Tampa, Fla., hotel room. It was Clark Griffith offering him the job and asking him if he would accept.

"Say 'yes' or 'no,'" said Griffith, but before Harris could answer the line was disconnected. Harris, then a second baseman of only two-years experience in the big legaues, was in a two-hour frenzy before he could get another connection to Washington telling Griffith he would take the job.

What Harris accomplished in that first year as manager of the Nats is a bright chapter in Washington baseball history. He led the club to the pennant and then beat the Giants in the seven-game World Series. The tip-off on the sort of guy Harris was in those days occurred during that World Series. All during the regular season he had hit one home run. In that series, he hit two, when the chips were down. Supposedly the weakest member of the Nats' batting order, he led both clubs in driving in runs during the series.

Cox Elated At Landing Ex-Nat Pilot

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—Stanley (Bucky) Harris, who has spent 23 years in the major leagues as second baseman and manager of the Washington Senators, Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox, was given the job today of rebuilding the last place National League Phils.

He was selected as manager by William D. Cox, 33-year-old New York sportsman, who purchased the Phils last week from the National Legaue. Enthusiastic over signing Harris, Cox wagered a carton of cigarets with a Philadelphia sportswriter that the Phils would be sixth at the end of the first month of play and would finish the season in sixth place or better.

Harris, now 46, gained fame as the "Boy Manager" in leading Washington to the 1924 American League pennant and a World Series triumph over the New York Giants. He stayed with Washington until 1928, then went to Detroit for five years as manager. From there he went to Boston under Tom Yawkey for a season, then returned to Washington for the last eight years. He resigned last September.

Saw Bucky In Series

"I saw Harris play in that 1924 World Series," Cox said in announcing the appointment. Cox was then 14 and Harris 27. "About five years ago I saw him again in an exhibition game at Atlanta. I liked the way he handled the players. When I got the Phils I asked about 10 men who should know what they thought of Harris. Everyone rated him A-1. They said he wants to win above all and that he is a man who can get the most out of any player."

Cox disclosed he received a telegram from Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox, saying "My sincerest choice for manager of your team is Bucky Harris." Cox replied "Your choice is my choice."

Cox contacted Harris Sunday at Harris' Washington home. They conferred in New York Tuesday and reached an agreement.

Neither Harris' salary nor the length of his contract was disclosed. "We hope it will be for a long time," Harris said, adding he would have turned down Cox's offer if it hadn't been "an attractive one."

Retained Chuck Klein

Harris' first act as manager was to retain Chuck Klein, one-time Phils slugger, as player-coach. He also talked with 60-year-old Hans Lobert, who managed the Phils last year.

"I understand that Lobert had been offered another position," Harris said. "I suggested that it might be well for him to look into this offer, but if nothing developed to see me when I get back from Washington on Monday."

Lobert announced later that he had accepted a coaching position with the Cincinnati Reds, the team he played with back in 1906.

"I'm sorry to leave Philadelphia," Lobert said. "But I can understand the new owners' feeling about making a complete change in the club. I wis.. Bucky Harris and Mr. Cox all the luck in the world."

It had been rumored that Lobert would be offered the same coaching job he held before becoming manager. Harris returned to his Washington home after the announcement.

Cox said he would announce the site of the Phils spring training camp tomorrow and perhaps the name of a trainer. He promised to disclose the names of his associates "some time next week." As for a business manager "that will come last of all."

Metro Clashes Taken by Saints, Eastern

Gonzagans Smashed by 34-26 Score

As smoothly as though its first entry in the eleventh Metropolitan basketball tournament was a daily occurrence, St. Albans School quintet last night routed Gonzaga, 34-26, to wind up first-round action in the annual meet at Tech gym. Eastern, runner-up for the public school title, opened the double bill with a 33-30 edge on Bethesda-Chevy Chase before a crowd of about 3500.

Thus tomorrow night's semifinals, starting at Tech at 7:30, will send Eastern's forces against George Washington High of Alexandria and St. Alban's against the public school champion, Tech. The winners will tangle Saturday for the crown won last season by Washington-Lee High.

There was little difference throughout between last night's opening foes. In the end it was Bob Lamon's toss with three minutes left, capped by a foul shot by Billy Deck, that decided in Eastern's favor. The Tide, which had suffered a three-point loss to the Barons during the regular season, were ahead by as many as eight points but started fading toward the end.

St. Albans, private school champ of Washington, calmly eliminated the last Catholic Prep five from the running with a torrid attack in the first half. It built up a 19-8 edge in the first half and wasn't very seriously pressed thereafter.

Earl Elliott, Saint forward, who hold the District of Columbia individual scoring lead, notched 9 points to tie Teammate Jim Trimble for the night's best effort.

'Boy Wonder' Hopes to Cure Ills of Phils

Bucky Harris, former Nats' pilot, tries on a Philadelphia uniform after signing to manage the National League club yesterday. That's William D. Cox, new club prexy, at right. Harris completed his second hitch with Washington last October. This is his first affiliation with a team in the older circuit. Harris said, "This is a job of rebuilding and I'll be glad to undertake it"

Navy Routs W. and M. by 57-30 Count

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24.—Handicapped by the loss of three key men and two substitutes to the Army, the William and Mary College quintet suffered its second defeat today in as many days by losing to the Navy, 57 to 30.

The Midshipmen, using three teams, took a comfortable 33-to-12 lead at the intermission and at no time were threatened by the Southerners.

After the first five minutes all indications pointed to a bang-up ball game but the Middies began a field goal barrage that was not halted until the last 30 seconds of the half when the visitors netted three points.

At the opening of the second half, Navy Coach John Wilson started his second string, which ran up a 20-point lead before giving away to the first five.

Wash. College Winner Over C. U., 65 to 41

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Washington College's powerful basketball team registered its tenth consecutive victory tonight, defeating Catholic University from Washington, 65 to 41, in a rough, fast game. The visitors started strong and held an early lead before the Shoremen tied the count at 12-all and 14-all. From that point, with Frank Samele and Paul Blawie carrying the brunt of the attack, the home team pulled steadily away.

Halftime count, 32 to 21, was in favor of Washington. C. U. made another bid to draw abreast at the start of the second session, but the Shoremen put on pressure to go into a 20-point lead midway in the period.

Samele and Blawie took scoring honors while Sam Limanek sparkled for the visitors.

The victory, Washington College's seventh straight without defeat in Mason-Dixon Conference, kept the Chestertown Collegians atop Maryland State Collegiate rankings and tied for the Mason-Dixon loop lead with Randolph-Macon.

Colonials, Hoyas on Garden Invitation Tournament List

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 24.—Thirty-eight schools were listed today by the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Committee as worthy for consideration to compete in the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden, March 18-22-27 and 29.

The list includes West Virginia, winner of last year's tournament, and Western Kentucky, the runner-up which has a 1942-43 record of 21 victories out of 23 games. Eight schools will be invited to compete in the tournament. The winner will be matched against the NCAA champion, also to be decided in the Garden March 29, in a Red Cross benefit game, April 1.

The schools under consideration are:

East—St. Louis (Brooklyn), New York University, Manhattan, Fordham, Long Island, Dartmouth, Rhode Island, Niagara, St. Joseph (Philadelphia), Villanova, Pennsylvania, Seton Hall, Princeton, W. and J. and West Virginia.

South—Duke, George Washington, Kentucky, Western Kentucky, Georgetown, Murray State and Appalachian.

Mid-West—Toledo, Notre Dame, Indiana, De Paul, Hamline, Creighton and Kansas.

Southwest—Texas, Texas Christian and Arizona.

Rocky Mountain—Wyoming.

Pacific Coast—Washington, Washington State, Southern California and Pepperdine.

Little Hoyas Top Episcopal

Georgetown Prep's Little Hoya quint, which dropped 14 of its first 15 games, captured its third straight yesterday at Alexandria, rallying in the second half to down Episcopal, 25-20.

Behind, 10-8, at halftime, the Little Hoyas, with O'Donnell and Speiss leading the way with 15 points between them, shot ahead, 20-17, at the third period and remained in front throughout the final quarter.

Airtight defense held the Alexandrians to only half a dozen field goals, while G. U. Prep tallied 11.

Caps Defeat Lions, 7 to 4

Jud McAtee, Connie Brown and Bill Cunningham piled up goals in overtime last night as the aggressive Indianapolis Capitals outlasted the Washington Lions in an American Hockey League match at Uline Arena, 7-4.

Connie Brown, who led the scoring by turning in the celebrated "hat trick" of three goals and adding an assist, was the game's star.

The Lions were leading, 4-3, with less than two minutes of regulation play remaining when alert Connie slipped the puck past Paul Gauthier on swift assists from Adam Brown and Joe Fisher.

Goalie Gauthier claimed the puck glanced off Connie Brown's skate was disallowed.

Al Hart Signed For 10-Rounder With Lou Brooks

One of the better heavyweight bouts of the indoor fistic season was closed out yesterday with the signing of Al Hart, Army War College soldier contender, and Lou Brooks, Wilmington Negro, for next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Hart will be making his first local appearance since he ran up a streak of nine straight at Turner's before he was shifted to a New York camp.

While fighting in the East, the 215-pound soldier scrapper hung up an enviable record. On the Louis-Buddy Baer title fight at Madison Square Garden, Hart scrapped to a semiwindup draw with Joe Baksi, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., fighter who is undefeated locally.

Joe DiMaggio Sent To Air Force School

Santa Ana, Calif., Feb. 24 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, who quit a $43,500-a-year job as outfielder for the New York Yankees to join the Army, has been assigned to duty at the Air Forces West Coast training center here.

Geo. Koverly Outslugs Yellow Mask

George (K. O.) Koverly's mighty right fist, plus unwitting assistance from Referee Casey Berger, proved the combination which defeated the villainous Yellow Mask in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night before a wrathful crowd of 2000.

Koverly captured the brawl after 30 minutes when he leaped into the ring, clubbed the Halloween figure to the floor as the Mask was being held by the arbiter, and then leaped on the meanie with a body press.

Just prior to the finale, Koverly was anxiously hovering outside the ropes, where he had been tossed by the Mask for the second consecutive time, and the hooded one wouldn't let him back to do battle. Referee Berger remonstrated with the Mask, and as they were tussling Koverly saw an opening and dropped one on his victim and then scampered in to complete the job. As an added touch, he booted the prone villain soundly on the head.

"I've been robbed again!" roared the Mask as he angrily stormed back to his boudoir.

Rudy Dusek and Tommy O'Toole worked to a rugged stalemate in the semiwindup. Twice during the affair, the handsome O'Toole pinned Dusek for a two-count, but the old master managed to wriggle out of danger each time.

Emil Dusek pinned Fred Grobmier in 14 minutes with a back drop after Grobby had clamped a body scissors on Dusek.

In the opener, the favored Johnny (Tripod) Long and Michele Leone, a noisy counterpart of Mussolini, worked to a rough and well-received draw.

Joe McCluskey Enters C. U. Track Games

Lieut. Joe McCluskey of the United States Navy, yesterday had agreed to pace Greg Rice, internationally famous distance runner, in Rice's bid to break his own world's mark at 2½ miles in the tenth annual Catholic University games set for Uline Arena a week from Monday night, March 8.

Both Rice and McCluskey beat the former world's record for the 2½ miles in the C. U. games at Riverside Stadium last winter as they beat the best time established previously by Taisto Maki, the Flying Finn, while finishing 1-2 respectively.

Lieutenant McCluskey, now located at Chapel Hill, N. C., yesterday advised Dorsey Griffith, director of the Catholic University games, that he has been training for six weeks, and will be ready for his best effort against Rice.

McCluskey and Rice, incidentally, are the only track athletes ever to have established world records here.

Briarley Defeats C. U. Frosh, 24-13

Briarley Military Academy turned back Catholic University Freshmen quint, 24-13, yesterday at C. U. gym.

Briarley, with Winthrop Lodge leading the attack with 12 points, went ahead, 13-9, in the first half and easily maintained its advantage throughout the final two periods.

Maryland Can Clinch S. C. Berth Tonight

A chance to clinch a berth in the Southern Conference basketball tournament, March 4, 5, 6, at Raleigh, N. C., is offered University of Maryland's vastly improved quint tonight when V. M. I. invades College Park at 8 p. m. A defeat will put the Old Liners on the borderline.

The Old Liners, who bowed to the Keydets, 35-34 in their Lexington clash, have been playing good ball lately, winning four of their last five games. Tonight, however, the Old Liners will be operating materially weakened by the loss of Ed Baitz, who yesterday was called into hte Army.

The Keydets have wone 6 of 10 conference games while the Old Liners have copped 5 in 9. The Keydets will stay over tomorrow night and meet G. W. at Eastern High School. It will be the final game of the year for Maryland tonight and G. W. tomorrow before the conference tournament.

11th St. Buffet Wins Third Round Crown

Savings Total Sets Peak of 29.9 Billion

Maybe they were salting their money against income tax day, or maybe there just wasn't enough to buy, but the American people saved more during 1942 than ever before, the Securities and Exchange Commission made known yesterday.

The commission disclosed in a quarterly analysis that individual savings for the year reached an all-high record of $29,900,000,000.

In addition, savings of $10,100,000,000 during the fourth quarter of last year topped all previous quarterly highs, including the $9,100,000,000 of the third quarter of 1942.

The commission said the volume of savings in the fourth quarter was due largely to substantial increases in cash holdings and deposits in checking accounts, amounting to $4,600,000,000, nearly a billion dollars higher than during the third quarter.

The public invested $3,300,000,000 in Government bonds, including $2,300,000,000 in war savings bonds, during the fourth quarter, an increase of half a billion over the previous period.

Repayment of individual debts, other than mortgages, fell far below those in previous periods.

Modified Ruml Plan Seen

A modified Ruml plan will be enacted by Congress in the 1943 Revenue Act, it was predicted at a meeting of the Controllers Institute Tuesday night in the Carlton Hotel.

The speaker, Maxwell E. McDowell, head of the tax department of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, also predicted that the new tax bill for 1943 will bring a probable increase of 15 billion dollars.

Attending the session were T. C. McCobb, national president of the Controllers Institute; J. A. Donaldson, past president of the national control, and also members of the Baltimore control.

Late Earnings Statements

Childs Co., a restaurant chain, reported today its consolidated net income for 1942 was $125,515, equal to $3.36 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, on which dividends are in arrears. For 1941 the company showed a net loss of $121,963.

Safeway Stores, Inc., and subsidiaries showed a preliminary net profit for 1942 of $4,522,595, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $4.06 a common share, against $5,036.060, or $4.91 a common share, in 1941.

Beneficial Industrial Loan Corp. and subsidiaries reported net income of $4,368,509 in 1942, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $1.99 a share on two million shares of common stock outstanding, compared with $5,828,119, or $2.35 a share, on 2,314,989 shares in 1941.

A PROPOSAL
on behalf of
450,000 WAR WORKERS

OUR BRAVE troops are fighting against the deadly enemies of our country on fronts a long way from home.

They have taken on the job of destroying the Fascist Axis.

They have taken on the most important task any brave men ever undertook on behalf of our nation.

How About the Home Foundation?

We care about our fighting men.

We are concerned with how they are doing over there.

Most of all, we are concerned with how we are doing here at home, to give them a solid foundation for their fight—solid support for their bravery.

For one thing, more than 70,000 of our fighting men are members of this Union—members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America.

But all of them, whether union brothers or not, are much on our minds and much in our hearts—for they are the sons, husbands, brothers and fathers of the people of America.

They are fighting for all of us, whether rich or poor, worker or banker or politician—all alike.

Wanted: A Stable War Economy

While our fighting men are facing the enemy far from home, is our nation, as a whole, giving them the right kind of support?

Are we giving them the solid, stable national economy which is absolutely essential to afford full support to our soldiers and sailors?

What does it take to make up a stable war economy?

It takes real price control. It takes real rationing of all essential goods and services. It takes a fair tax program. It takes a stabilized wage structure. It takes nationally planned production.

For all these things, our President and our Commander-in-chief called nearly one year ago.

Remember President Roosevelt's "7-Point Economic Program?" That was what we needed—and that is what we haven't got today.

EVERY HOUSEWIFE, every home-maker knows that we do not have real price control today.

Instead of a halt to skyrocketing prices, we have today the blunt statement by the head of OPA that he is not going to halt rising prices!

Instead of real rationing, we have a flood of press releases—alibis, excuses, delays, everything except a real rationing program.

Food distribution is in a chaotic state. There are no real controls in operation—it is a field day for the profiteers.

The kind of tax program the country needs is one that will raise the money to pay the cost of winning the war—and raise it according to ability to pay; without favors for profiteers and special privileges for the rich and powerful.

Instead we have a tax program which is undermining sub-marginal incomes—incomes already too low to sustain proper production efficiency in the war effort.

Instead of Wage Stabilization . . .

In place of wage stabilization, we have the so-called "Little Steel" formula of the War Labor Board.

We see the agencies that are supposed to stabilize the entire economy interested in just one thing: freezing, not stabilizing, wages.

Of the 7 points of the President's program, only one is being given attention—and as for this one, wages, the net result is to undermine that part of our whole economy which affects the ability of the working people to keep on working.

It is the same for all working people, whether they are in unions or not.

The working people get profiteering instead of price control, excuses instead of rationing, "soak the poor" taxes instead of a fair tax program—and on top of it, they get wage freezing.

Gentlemen of Washington, the working people don't like it!

Something to Do About It

We don't like it.

The 450,000 war production workers which this union represents—in such large war plants as those of Westinghouse, General Electric, General Motors electrical division, RCA, Allis-Chalmers, and more than 800 others—don't think that's the way to achieve a stable war economy here at home.

But the members of this union know that winning the war is far more important than correcting the many injustices now being done to the working people!

Our members have expressed their concern for our fighting men in something a lot more than words—in action.

Our workers have been working longer and harder than ever in history—to put into the hands of our fighting men the best weapons that skilled hands can make or that money (a lot of it our money, too, in War Bonds) can buy!

So we have decided to express our desire for the needed stable war economy in something more than words.

We have a practical action to propose to the agencies of Government charged with these responsibilities and to the employers in our industry.

Here it is:

WE, The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, representing more than 450,000 war workers in this country, and desiring to stabilize the national economy so that our fighting forces may have a firm home base for their heroic efforts, now ask that during the month of March Mr. James F. Byrnes, Director of Economic Stabilization, call a conference of:

Representatives of the Economic Stabilization Board.
Representatives of the Office of Price Administration.
Representatives of the War Labor Board
Representatives of the Food Administrator
Representatives of our industry, the electrical and machine manufacturing industry.

At this conference, this union will undertake the following proposal:

What This Union Will Do

(1) The union will voluntarily abstain from demanding the general Cost of Living wage rise that would be negotiated during the next months when our contracts are expiring.

(2) Each firm will from March 15 to August 15 pay into a special fund an amount to cover the increase in Cost of Living from May 15, 1942, to March 15, 1943, for its employees covered by this union's collective bargaining contracts.

(3) During the same period, the responsible Government agencies shall undertake to carry out their responsibilities to halt rising prices, to bring about a real rationing program, to organize food distribution properly, to enact a fair tax program, and really to stabilize our war economy as they were directed to do by the President of the United States.

(4) On August 15th of this year the same representatives will again reconvene.

(5) If by that time the responsible Government agencies have in fact fulfilled their obligations to the whole country by really stabilizing our economy, then the money accumulated in the special funds shall be paid to the Treasury of the United States in exchange for War Bonds, which Bonds shall then be distributed to each employee, each to receive his equal share. The special funds shall then be discontinued. Thereafter, each firm shall pay in War Bonds a flat cents-per-hour increase to cover the Cost of Living increase that took place from May of last year to March 15 of this year.

(6) If, on the contrary, August 15th finds our national economy in the same state of disorganization as now, and finds our Government agencies still unable to control the situation, then each firm will add a flat cents-per-hour raise to base rates of wages, such increase to reflect the increase that will have taken place in Cost of Living from May 15, 1942, to August 15, 1943—and in this event the increase will be paid in money, to enable the working men and women to maintain their production efficiency.

Upon acceptance of this proposal, which is a fair and practical one, we shall recommend its ratification to our entire membership!

THERE IT IS. That is what this union will do in order to help give our whole country a stable war economy.

Our members are willing to abstain from their just demands for a general Cost of Living wage rise at this time, so that we can have long-overdue price control, rationing, wage stabilization, fair taxes and the other items of a solid war economy.

How about you, Mr. Government Official? How about you, Mr. Employer? How about you, Mr. Congressman?

Are the Government agencies ready now to get down to business? Are you ready to give to the worker, the farmer, the professional men, the housewife—to everybody—some real price control, some real rationing, a real fair-and-square tax program?

Gentlemen, it's up to you!

ALBERT J. FITZGERALD
General President;
JULIUS EMSPAK,
General Secretary-Treasurer;
JAMES J. MATLES,

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Alarming Federal Turnover Cited

Administration spokesmen yesterday put up convincing and hard-to-answer arguments in support of the Mead bill which would increase the incomes of white-collar Federal employees, at a hearing before the House Civil Service Committee. Committee members were obviously impressed. Figures cited by Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming, for example, were downright astounding, and if they hadn't come from an official source they would have been hard to believe. In the six-month period from July 1 to January 1, the commission made 102,232 placements in Washington. Only 17,903 were for new jobs and the enormous remainder—84,329—were made to fill vacancies. Flemming didn't have to mention that turnover was excessive and alarming.

In the District for the single month of December the commission made 12,907 placements, yet the department service during that month showed a net loss of 57 employes. December was the first month the departmental service showed a decrease in several years. And remember, the present overtime act which raised salaries became effective in December. The Civil Service official admitted it was just about impossible to recruit people for some Federal agencies here. He blamed this condition on stories that had been told and written about Capital conditions. The commission made 1,383,857 placements in the entire service during the last half of 1942 and about 60 per cent—or 779,856—were made to fill vacancies.

Flemming pointed out that the present overtime act expires on April 30 and that the white-collar workers would go back on a 44-hour work week under the law unless new legislation is passed. He went on to say that the Government had ordered large blocs of industrial workers put on a 48-hour work week, and that these people were being paid full time and a half after 40 hours. "Uncle Sam will be put in the position," Flemming pointed out, "of failing to practice what he preaches unless we do the same thing for his own employes." The Mead bill, he said, was absolutely necessary and he expressed the fear that turnover would be even greater if overtime was allowed to lapse.

The Mead bill would change the rate under which overtime is paid to white-collar employes to the accepted formula in industry; that is, full time and a half on hours actually worked. An estimated 60 per cent of Federal employes—per diem workers in arsenals and Navy yards—already get the full overtime. To the average white-collar employe it would mean a raise of 30 per cent over his base pay—in other words, 12 hours pay for the eight hours of additional work now required. The white-collar employe now gets 21.6 per cent additional for the extra eight hours. Flemming urged that employes in the Library of Congress, Botanic Gardens, and Architect of the Capitol be given the 30 per cent increase instead of the proposed flat 15 per cent raise suggested for employes who can't work more than 40 hours.

William H. McReynolds placed the President's seal of approval on the legislation. Moreover, he urged the committee to bring in postal employes under the bill and pay them overtime like all other Federal employes. He wants this bill to be uniform. The President's administrative assistant said he'd be delighted to recommend a veto for the bill now in Congress which would give postal employes a flat $300 raise plus overtime. Flemming agreed. Flemming cited a long list of reasons which employes gave for leaving the service. When he finished, Representative Carter Manasco of Alabama remarked that some of the girls from his part of the country had resigned because they had been made to work in the same rooms with Negroes. Flemming said he had no information on that point and he denied that the commission had been ordered to hire a certain percentage of Negroes.

Frank Hugh Sparks will be appointed chief of the Bureau of Labor Utilization of War Manpower. He's president of Wabash College and one of several Indiana educators to be given top jobs by Paul McNutt. . . . The House Appropriations Committee has again refused to give the Employment Service funds to raise the salaries of its employes to the minimum Federal level. State levels now prevail. Employment Service people have quit by the thousands and McNutt's hands are tied without a strong Employment Service. The entire Manpower program depends on a storong Employment Service. This is the third time McNutt has failed to get the money and on Capitol Hill it's being whispered that this is the beginning of the end for McNutt.

The President has begun to backtrack on the McKellar bill, which would make Federal employes earning more than $4500 subject to confirmation. He isn't nearly so mad about it now.

Putting On the Heat

Salt Lake City.—Fire Chief Jack Clay wants the rationing board office evicted from the fire station.

He has no personal ill will toward the board, the chief explained, but: "The public seems to think the fire department is running the ration board and is responsible for their not getting gas and sugar."

Air Program Of Red Cross Opens Drive

Speakers Sunday In Radio Appeal Include Roosevelt And Eisenhower

Members of the publicity committee for the American Red Cross' $1,555,400 war fund drive in the District met yesterday at the Hotel Raleigh to discuss final plans for the campaign which opens Monday.

C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the public relations division, revealed that a Nation-wide radio hookup for the fund at 4 p. m. Sunday will have as its speakers President Roosevelt, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower from North Africa and Admiral Chester Nimitz from the Pacific theater of operations.

"Interpreters" for the Red Cross, known simply as workers in prewar days of annual roll calls, will attend a mass meeting March 4 at noon in the departmental auditorium to launch an intensive drive in the metropolitan area.

Meanwhile, in honor of the March campaign, three top United States generals—Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, General Eisenhower and Gen. Douglas MacArthur—yesterday lauded the services of the Red Cross which "never fails a soldier."

The home service branch of the Red Cross, which handles domestic problems of servicemen while they're away from home, was singled out for General Marshall's praise.

"The fighting efficiency of a soldier is greatly enhanced when he knows that during his absence the welfare of his loved ones is the subject of interested concern other than his own," Marshall said. He urged "every citizen" to contribute in the coming drive.

General Eisenhower pointed out that the Red Cross is the only agency of its kind to serve our forces overseas. Calling its services in the European theater "invaluable," he stated:

"At the scores of service clubs established throughout Great Britain our forces, while on leave, are able to obtain meals, lodging, information and recreation—all with an American home atmosphere."

Catholic Workers Hear USO Head

Chester I. Barnard, president of United Service Organizations, yesterday told a training institute of National Catholic Community Service club directors that the cooperation of various agencies of the U. S. O. has resulted in the "promotion of the spirit of brotherhood and tolerance among American people."

President Barnard spoke at Catholic University and was introduced to N. C. C. S. directors and other representatives from all sections of the Nation by the Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Service. Others present included the Very Rev. Msgr. Howard J. Carroll, secretary of the N. C. C. S. governing committees; John F. Hickey of New York, U. S. O. treasurer, and William D. Boehm, comptroller of the U. S. O.

Postlude

Marine Orchestra's Program Pleases Receptive Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Captain William F. Santelmann conducts the United States Marine Band Orchestra in Barracks Hall on Wednesday night. Soloist: Earl Schuster. Program: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" (Berlioz), Symphony No. 3 ("Scotch") in A minor (Mendelssohn), Oboe Concerto in G minor (Handel), Suite from "Zhar Ptitza" (Stravinski).

Barracks Hall was well filled at the weekly concert of the United States Marine Band Orchestra last evening, when Capt. William F. Santelmann conducted his uniformed men in a pleasant program that ranged from Handel to Stravinski by way of Mendelssohn and Berlioz. This arrangement allowed auditors so disposed to trace some of the changes in instrumentation and harmony from the classical to the modern style. Performance of the compositions was thoroughly competent in execution and spirited in feeling, while the audience was in almost receptive mood.

BROWN

Earl Schuster was a capable soloist in a rarely heard oboe concerto by Handel, that indefatigable master who composed so much music that one can live a lifetime without meeting more than a small part of it. There is small chance these days of hearing any of his 46 operas or more than two of his 25 oratorios, to say nothing of the mass of smaller works. So one thanks the soloist and the conductor for choosing this concerto which has the typical Handelian qualities of sturdiness, sedate humor, dramatic force and dignity.

Mendelssohn's "Scotch" symphony is one of the fine flowers of the early romantic period and retains its freshness even in this shriveling age of economics. The preservative in the music is the enthusiasm with which it was written as impressions of a foreign land. When Mendelssohn first visited Scotland, he was at the impressionable age of 20, and the symphony records what he felt at the contact. One likes to imagine that the somber introduction reflects his melancholy meditations over the fate of Mary Queen of Scots, for the first 16 measures were jotted down at Holyrood. Elsewhere he encountered the scenes and folk tunes that make the symphony so lively a picture.

The overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" reveals the theatrical instincts of Berlioz who was too undisciplined in music to compose a successful opera. The subject was one in which he must have delighted, for Cellini embodied his own ideal of the artist at war with the world, and creating masterpieces under the most adverse circumstances.

If Berlioz was an innovator in instrumental effects, Stravinski beat him at that game. The "Firebird" suite is filled with ingenious devices of tone color that make the music kaleidoscopic and fascinating. It is a tour de force of inventive skill, whether one considers the shimmering delicacies of the berceuse or the horrendous clamor of Kashchei's dance.

Arrest Bares $10,000 In Car Loot

1 Man Seized Rifling Auto; Second Taken Into Custody Later

Two men surrendered to police last night between $5000 and $10,000 worth of stolen property after one of the pair was seized by a rookie policeman in the act of rifling a parked car.

It was estimated after a preliminary investigation that the total car-lootings, extending over a year, will number between 45 and 50 and probably will involve $20,000.

Alert police work by Private N. L. Richardson, Third Precinct, a patrolman for four months, brought about the captures. He was watching a car loaded with luggage near Seventeenth and G Streets Northwest, about 4:30 a. m. to warn its owner of the danger from thieves. The car, he said, belonged to Carlos Lazo, jr., attached to the Mexican Embassy.

While he watched a man approached, broke a window and systematically began depositing clothing and suitcases on the sidewalk. Richardson seized him. A companion fled, only to be arrested later.

One suspect, 39, said he was a jewelry salesman. The other, 35, is a mechanic at a downtown garage.

Detectives G. W. Chapman, F. L. Gaver and L. L. Frost raided the salesman's home on Franklin Street Northeast yesterday. A carload of loot, including property stolen from two autos Tuesday night, was recovered.

The latter two victims were identified as Thomas L. Clear of New York City, and Capt. R. M. Breese of Louisville, Ky. They reported about $600 worth of clothing and property taken from their cars parked in the 700 block Twentieth Street Northwest.

At the jeweler's home police found many stolen articles wrapped and addressed for mailing out-of-town. A valuable silverware set, it was said, was addressed to Jacksonville, N. C. A sewing machine was traced to Detroit.

Included in the recovered articles were radios, a washing machine, clothing jewelry and silverware.

Investigation of the thefts probably will extend throughout the week, it was said, and also will result in efforts being made to trap the dealers disposing of the stolen property.

Victory Sidelights

Dietitians Asked to Aid Food Balance

Washington dietitians were called upon last night to begin devising protein substitutes against the day when meat and the usual alternative foods, cheese and eggs will be rationed.

Miss Calla Van Syckle of the OPA Consumers Division, addressing the Washington branch of the American Dietetic Association, warned the members that rationing of the substitute products would probably come in at the time that meat rationing does—and that both would be very low. Miss Van Syckle explained the mechanics of registration for institutional rationing, but was not prepared to say how nearly hospital and charitable institution rationing would approach the 50 per cent cut given restaurants.

Russian Relief Fete

The Alliance Club of Washington will stage a Russian War Relief night at the Hamilton Hotel tonight at 9 o'clock. Members will contribute bundles of clothing and other items sought by Russian War Relief for the civilian population of our fighting ally. A program of entertainment will be offered.

Woman's Club to Meet

The February meeting of the Providence District Woman's Club will be held tonight, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. J. P. Fletcher, near Tyson's Corner. Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Anthony of Vienna will speak in behalf of the Red Cross War Fund drive.

Truck Driver Injured

Odell Heath, Negro, 35, 1231 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, a truck driver employed by a contractor working at the Pentagon Building, suffered internal injuries yesterday when a drive shaft from a truck he was repairing fell upon him. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital, where attendants said his condition was serious.

Honorary Degrees

Six honorary degrees were conferred at the service. Honorary degrees of doctor of divinity went to George F. Rixey, United States Army chaplain; William Nathaniel Thomas, Navy chaplain; the Rev. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent, Washington East Methodist District, and former Emory Methodist pastor, and the Rev. Oliver Joseph Collins, superintendent, Wilmington District, Peninsular Conference, Methodist Church. Dr. Lucius Charles Clark, chancellor-emeritus of the university, was given an honorary doctor of laws degree, and Dr. Arthur Carlisle Christie, local physician, and former chairman of the board of the university, an honorary doctor of science degree.

Fellowships for Icelandic students in American Methodist institutions were presented to Icelandic Minister Thor Thors at the convocation program.

GINSBERG

One Man Ceremony

Because he soon enters the armed services, student Reuben Ginsberg of Athens, Tex., received his bachelor of arts degree at a unique one-man "graduation" ceremony at the jubilee breakfast in the Women's Residence Hall. Bishop Leonard, president of the university's board of trustees, was breakfast host to university officials and Protestant legislators. Vermont's Senator Warren R. Austin paid tribute to one of the State's favorite sons—Dr. Douglass.

A buffet supper, followed by a pageant "Our Founders," in the university "gym," climaxed the day's program.

2 Men Killed In Potomac Plane Crash

Victims Identified As Seaman McGowan Of Washington, and 2d Lieut. Carney

The crash of a Navy plane at 1:45 p. m. Sunday in the Potomac River near Fort Hunt, cost the life of a Navy seaman, first class, native Washingtonian and father of three children, and that of a second lieutenant of Marine Corps Reserves, the Navy made known yesterday.

The Washingtonian was Seaman, First Class, Aloysius Edward McGowan, whose wife, Mrs. Mary Helene McGowan, and children, Edward B., David A., and Mary G. McGowan, reside at 3222 Tenth Street Northeast.

With him in the plane and also killed was Second Lieut. Durwood E. Carney, U. S. M. C. R., whose address was given at Tahlequah, Okla.

Lieutenant Carney's body was sent to Palequah for burial. Funeral services for Mr. McGowan were held yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. McGowan, the Navy said, was a former employe of the Government Printing Office and enlisted in the Navy Reserve on September 15, 1942. He was born in Washington on September 3, 1905.

The plane, of a type not officially identified, was found to have sustained major damage. Immediately following the crash, civilian eye witnesses identified it as a pursuit ship. One such witness, Arthur Baltzell, 1314 Sixth Street Southwest, said the plane just missed trees on the Maryland shore, made a three-point landing on the river, skipped like a rock for some 50 feet, heeled over and sank.

D. C. Pay Raise Bills May Reach Senate Today

Chairman Pat McCarran of the Senate District Committee will try to bring his bills giving District policemen, firemen and teachers earning less than $5000 a flat $350 raise before the Senate today, he announced yesterday.

Informed of McCarran's announcement, Senator Harold H. Burton said that of course if McCarran's bills were introduced, he would move his substitute bill which provides for a smaller increase. Burton's bill has the backing of the District Commissioners.

The Burton bill gives policemen and firemen of less than five years' standing a $140 annual increase, and provides a 10 per cent increase for teachers. For police and fire department personnel of five years' standing and more than Burton bill gives a $300 annual increase on salaries of less than $5000.

Suspension Stayed

The Office of Price Administration yesterday granted a temporary stay of its order suspending the Haines Gas Station, 6503 Georgia Avenue Northwest, from obtaining additional gas because of its alleged violation of the gas ration regulations.

At the same time attorneys for the gas station entered a plea in motions court to permanently enjoin the OPA from enforcing the order claiming that in no instance did they sell gasoline without first obtaining the proper number of ration coupons. Pretrial hearings in the case will be held in District Court March 12.

200 Hostesses Hear Story Of USO Birth, Rapid Growth

Two hundred hostesses representing the 2000 volunteers in nine local United Service Organizationss clubs met last night at a dinner in Barker Hall of the Young Women's Christian Association at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, in the first gathering of its kind here since USO was organized two years ago.

Walter Hoving of New York, president of Lord & Taylor, and first president of the organization, told workers of the beginnings of USO, when he and several other prominent New Yorkers first planned Nation-wide recreation—but only three of 50 prospective committee members attended the first meeting.

"It was pretty disheartening," he said, "but suddenly I thought of Tom Dewey, so I had the USO secretary call him and say that a group of citizens wished to see him about a very important matter—and made an appointment for the next day.

"Then I reached all the citizens, including a few bank presidents, and told them that Tom Dewey had called a very important meeting. Naturally I had to explain the whole thing to them outside Dewey's office and fortunately they were sufficiently convinced of the worth of the USO plan to carry on.

"The next day the USO secretary called me and said: 'You'd better get right over here. Tom Dewey is in your office going through all your papers and files. After he had investigated for several days, he decided to accept the chairmanship of USO, and his was a job of salesmanship.

"Our goal two and a half years ago was 10 million dollars. We raised 15 million, as people gradually found out what USO meant. That goal seems strange today, for in our last campaign we raised 33 million dollars."

Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, chairman of the national women's committee and vice chairman of USO, described other clubs she has visited throughout the country, where junior hostesses call themselves "Duration Damsels" or "Liberty Belles" or "GSO," standing for Girls' Service Organizations, now numbering about 80,000 members.

"I think that the hundreds of buildings in the Nation that house USO clubs are typical of our democracy," she said. "I saw a converted bank in Memphis, a warehouse in Texas, a former mortuary in California. Twenty-five per cent of the buildings are standard Government ones, built particularly for us—and the rest are catch-as-catch-can, borrowed for the duration."

Hero of Pacific War, 20 Other Soldiers Take Oath as New Citizens of United States

SOLDIER-CITIZENS—They took citizen's oath yesterday

Master Sergt. Anthony Holub, 38, the first enlisted soldier in the United States Army to receive the Distinguished Service Cross in this war, yesterday became a citizen of the United States when he was granted his final papers before District Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts.

SERGT. HOLUB

Sergeant Holub was one of 21 soldiers receiving their citizenship papers yesterday. The group represented 12 different nationalities.

Sergeant Holub was in the Philippines when the Japs struck, attached to the Nineteenth Bombardment Group, which fought its way up and down the South Pacific and now is the most-decorated group in the United States Air Corps.

His citation specifically states that when the Japs started the Philippine airfield where his Flying Fortress was grounded he manned the plane's machine gun and gave blow-for-blow until his ammunition was exhausted. Then—despite a rain of enemy lead—he ran across the field, secured additional ammunition, returned to his plane and single-handedly continued the battle. He is officially credited with knocking down two Jap Zeros during this engagement.

He's been in the Army for 15 years and until yesterday was officially a citizen of Czecho-Slovakia. His wife and son live at Wink, Tex.

The group and the nationalities represented are:

Britain: Jack Jolley, Ernest Fell, John Joseph Gormley, Francis MacLeod MacIver and Walter Ewart Seager. Armenia: Aram Nazarian. Czecho-Slovakia: Michael John Kment, John Valik and Sergeant Holub. Russia: Louis Sobel and Ben Futternick. Cuba: Angel Felix Ibarra. Greece: James Kares. Poland: Kenneth Hennick. German: Emil Rahn, jr. Mexico: Antonio Castanon. France: Charles Camille Winnee, and Costa Rica, Louis Finalson.

Clothing and Money Thefts Are Reported

Frank E. Weisman, assistant manager of Phillipsborn, Inc., at 610 Eleventh Street Northwest, reported to police last night that the store had been entered and clothing valued at $504 stolen.

William J. Beard, 4926 Fifth Street Northwest, reported to police yesterday that his home had been entered through an unlocked window and took $450 from a tool chest in the basement. Police are seeking an escaped convict in connection with the larceny.

News in Brief of the Wartime Capital

Three District merchants were fined $10 each in Municipal Court yesterday for violating the blackout laws by leaving lights on in their establishments during Monday's blackout.

The three fined were Homer Liebersohn and Nathan Movitz, both of whom operate stores in the 1100 block of Seventh Street Northwest, and Charles Friendenberg, owner of a meat market at 409 Morse Street Northeast.

Check Team Pleads Guilty

Pleas of guilty were entered yesterday by Anthony Le Bolo, 31, and Sylvia Bowlby, 23, named by the District Grand Jury on numerous counts of forging and uttering checks, false pretenses and violating the National Stolen Property Act.

The operations of the pair extended over a year and FBI charges that approximately $18,000 was fraudulently obtained from District banks and department stores through ingeniously operating the forged check racket. Sentence was expected to be pronounced March 5.

Pickets Pick Fine

After pleading guilty yesterday in Municipal Court to picketing the British Embassy in protest to the imprisonment of Mohandas K. Gandhi in India, Ralph T. Emplin and Jay Smith, both of New York City, elected to spend the next 30 days in jail instead of paying the $25 fine, the choice given them by the court.

Both men stated their determination to go on an eight-day hunger strike in protest against the sentence. They were arrested Monday carrying a huge banner in front of the Embassy.

Museum Open Late

The Lincoln Museum, Tenth Street between E and F Streets Northwest, will be open every day until 9 p. m. to enable late working war and Government workers to visit the newly arranged exhibit, Superintendent Irving C. Root, National Capital Parks, announced yesterday.

Held for Grand Jury

Edward Page Gaston, 74, arrested January 13 for wearing the uniform of a United States Army captain, was ordered held for action by the District Grand Jury after a hearing yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

At the hearing Gaston claimed, through old files he produced, that he had War Department authorization for wearing the uniform because of his association several years ago with the New York Guard. The Government contended the organization had never been Federalized.

Woman Wins Damage Suit

Mrs. Josephine C. Nourse, an elderly resident of the Wardman-Park Hotel, won a $200 verdict yesterday in District Court against the Calvary Baptist Church, I and Eighth Streets Northwest, where she had been a member for the past 40 years.

The suit was based on her allegation that last May 25, 1941, she sustained severe injuries when a hand-rail broke loose while she was descending an interior stairway in the church. The injuries, she alleges, have made her an invalid ever since. She was represented in court by Attorneys E. C. Blanchard and Charles H. Quimby.

On Traffic Council

The Commissioners yesterday appointed to the Traffic Advisory Council Harry J. Brown, Dr. William T. Grady and the Rev. E. C. Smith.

Brown, 6412 Ridgeway Road Northwest, is a Washington correspondent for two Western newspapers. Grady, a dentist, is a delegate to the Federation of Civic Associations and is the chairman of its public safety committee. Smith, professor of religion at Howard University, is also pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Women's Club News

Come Sunday, Miss Leslie Ford, prolific writer of mystery stories, will have a word for the Greek letter gals. Occasion is the District of Columbia Panhellenic Association's noon "brunch" at the Statler Hotel.

Between 600 and 700 college and fraternity women, representing the 21 national Greek letter womens' fraternities, already have made reservations for the event. "We hope many of the newcomers to Washington with whom we are not in contact will attend the breakfast," said Mrs. James S. Hathcock, president and a member of Delta Delta Delta. Miss Louise Wilson, 2818 Wisconsin Avenue, is taking reservations.

Honor guests will be members of each national fraternity who have contributed outstanding service in community or public life. To mention a few—Miss Katherine Lenroot, head of the United States Children's Bureau; Mrs. Clyde M. Hadley, president of the D. C., A. A. U. W.; Mrs. William Hutchinson, District governor of Alpha Phi; Ensign Florence Smith, first class of WAVES at Smith College; Mrs. Willis Compton, chairman of USO council of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. John Dorr, in charge of radio program, "Harmony House;" Mrs. Alexander Mathis, member board of trustees, Pine Mountain School in Kentucky; Evelyn Davis, dancer; Mrs. Matthew Ramish, personnel director, Welfare Recreation Association; Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of Senator Andrews of Florida; Mrs. Estelle Phillips, vice principal, Woodrow Wilson High School; Miss Doris Irwin, acting director of the Child Research Center; Mrs. John Ribble, former national secretary of Alpha Omega Pi; Miss Katherine Schrivener, supervising principal, Third division of District of Columbia public schools.

But back to the speaker of the day. Miss Ford, in private life the wife of Ford K. Brown, head of the English department at St. John's College in Annapolis, will discuss "The Responsibility of Educated Women Toward the Home Front." In case you aren't familiar with Leslie Ford's name, perhaps David Frome will ring a recognized note. That, too, is one of her pen names.

B'nai B'rith Tea

Representatives of the United Nations turned out full strong at the victory tea given by B'nai B'rith, Argo Lodge, yesterday at the Jewish Community Center. The event was held in cooperation with Mrs. Roosevelt's Victory Book Campaign. Hundreds of volumes of books were collected at the tea to be sent to the boys in the armed services.

United States Army Nurses, WRENS, WAAFS, WAVES, WAACS, SPARS and the Women's Reserve of the Marines were the honor guests. Speakers included Lieut. Charlotte Gower of the Women's Marines; Lieut. E. Graiggragringe Sur-en, commanding officer of the A. T. S.; Lieut. Helen Freudenberger of the WAACS; Lieut. (j. g.) Teresa Crowley, SPAR; Lieut. (j. g.) Hazel Markel, WAVE.

Opening prayer was given by the wife of chief of Jewish Army chaplains, Mrs. Areyeh Lav. Mrs. Katherine Hurtzberg, soloist, and Anne Sugar, pianist, gave a musical program.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

What do you suppose has taken the place of Hollywood glamour. Just plain hard work. The movie stars are doing more of it than ever before in their lives and it seems to be agreeing with them—probably because they are paying more attention to health. Certainly, they are all for the balanced diet.

Lovely Loretta Young is among the new order of hard workers. She puts in a day that would leave a sturdier looking woman whipped down and out of sorts. For example, she averages a good 10 hours at the studio. After that, she goes over to the service men's canteen and serves as hostess for another couple of hours. And after that, she can go home. But she doesn't usually go to bed until she has written maybe half a dozen letters to the boys' "folks back home" assuring them the lads are all right.

When she has a little time off, Miss Young is usually off on a whirlwind bond selling tour. Or, if she is in New York, she can put in 18 hours a day posing for pictures and giving interviews. People associated with her tell me they have never known her to be cross, and I can tell you that she is a sight prettier in person than on the screen. No woman's looks and disposition can be good when she works that hard unless she keeps fit. Miss Young does.

She is completely sold on what she calls "proper eating. It isn't a diet, it is the habit of eating the right foods," she says. Several years ago my doctor suggested a list of foods necessary to health, and I stick closely to the list. I always have two dark green vegetables a day and one egg. I drink a quart of milk and eat all the potatoes I want. I can't get enough of them!"

You could have all the potatoes ou want, too, if you were careful not to exceed your calorie needs in some other direction.

But one of her best tips on proper eating is for the thin girl with a small food capacity.

"I can't eat a great deal at a time, but I find that I can get plenty of food throughout the day by taking several small meals. So instead of three regular meals, I have six small ones." But she eats these on schedule, which is different from taking sweets between meals.

Her weight never varies from the 109 pounds at which she feels and looks best.

Rationing Made Easy

How Can "Point" Buying Be Made More Simple?

You have probably clipped the official table of point values for processed foods which was printed in The Washington Post on Monday, February 22.

In order to save shopping time, circle in red the point values of each food for the size of the cans you usually buy for your family. For example, the popular No. 2 can of peas weighs 1 pound 4 ounces—value 16 points. If you take the official table to the grocer's next week and check off the weights of fruits and vegetables you ordinarily buy, you will be able to compute total points exactly in the future, before you go to the store. This will not only save time, but will also help you to avoid wasting points; by figuring up point values in advance, you can arrange your buying so that every point is used. Remember—you will get no "change" in points. It is also a good idea to "spend" high-value coupons first, leaving small "denominations" for smaller purchases.

If you order groceries by telephone, it is doubly important that you become familiar with the weights of various cans.

The local defense councils of OCD are recruiting volunteer "explainers" who will be in many grocery stores next week to help shoppers in buying rationed goods. If you become confused by point values and weights, look for the "explainer" in your local grocery store.

DATES TO REMEMBER:

Point rationing of processed foods goes into effect March 1. Each person is entitled to use A, B and C coupons (total 48 points) from Ration Book II during the month of March.

Shoes—Stamp No. 17 is good for one pair until June 15.

Gasoline—Coupon No. 4 expires March 21.

Sugar—Stamp No. 11 is good for 3 pounds until March 15.

Fuel oil—Fourth period coupons expire April 6.

Tires—Holders of "B" and "C" cards must have tires inspected by February 26; "A" card holders by March 31.

Your Baby and Mine

Have Special Toys for Special Occasions

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Unless the mother puts her wits to work to provide unusual entertainment for rainy or bitterly cold days, she is apt to find the children creating bedlam, because of enforced inactivity. The parent's disposition will be frayed in her efforts to endure it.

Mrs. G. L. C. thinks that mothers should plan for days when children will, of necessity, be housed up. She writes, "I have put away some of my daughter's books and personally have cut out two boxes of paper dolls and their clothes to put on the rainy-day shelf.

"It's fun to have the neighbor children in to help pass the time. Here are some games children of 9 or over can enjoy.

"Let each child tell a story, or if he fails, let him sing a song, or recite a poem, or do a dance.

"Blindfold the children and let them draw some familier object.

"Without the blindfold they could try to draw the map of North American or any other object. Or they might do imitations of familiar animals. They might be made to name all the capitals of the States or provinces."

Some of this sounds like more work than fun—and it might be to children who were more active than studious. One would have to suit the games to the children involved.

Any mother might keep a scrapbook of games she has cut from magazines or copied from books concerned with children's play. These would be extremely useful on days when there is a concerted whine to be told what to do.

All children grow tired of certain toys and these could be put away for the special occasion when, brought forth again, they would seem like new.

These same toys do very nicely for a box called a visitor's box, from which toys could be given to small visitors and thus avoid that whining and grumbling aroused when the young host is deprived of his own favorites.

Materials which are useful in play should make up another box for the shelf. Clean, empty bottles, spools, small cardboard boxes, glass or porcelain jars, small notebooks, samples of any kind, pieces of material, ends of yarn, slips or colored paper, colored pictures clipped from magazines, all of these provide a shut-in with just that particular junk the sight of which is inspiration in itself.

The value of any toy is in its novelty at the moment when, all ordinary play being curtailed, he needs something different to stimulate his imagination.

Our leaflet, "Amusement and Diet for the Convalescent Child," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER XIII

"Johnny is out looking for her, Judy. He heard all about Simpson and Eleanor in the Steamboat lounge tonight. If Simpson has coaxed her away, Johnny will kill him!"

Judith well knew that was true. "Sit tight, Blair, I'll be right out."

The moonlight was white about her as she drove to the Sinclair's. A dog barked in the distance, but the lights in the houses were out, and the little town slept on. Judith drew Old Liz up beside the curb and ran up on the porch and opened the door. Blair was hovering near the telephone in the little study off the hall.

Judith heard the brakes on a car screech as it slid up to the curb. But it wasn't Johnny's car. It was Hugh McAllister's. Judith ran out, followed by Blair.

Hugh lifted Eleanor out of the car and carried her up the walk. "She's all right," he said reassuringly. "But I had to treat her a little rough!"

He strode into the living room and dumped her onto the divan. Eleanor looked up at him out of frightened eyes, her hair disheveled and her dress rumpled. He stood looking down at her grimly and finally said, "You'd better put this baby into school until she learns a few things."

Eleanor began to cry. "Get out of here. I hate you, you big brute!" She lay where he had dropped her, the tears trembling on her long lashes, her red lips distorted.

Blair dropped to her knees beside here. "Oh, Eleanor, how you frightened us. Where have you been, dear?"

Eleanor looked wildly at Hugh, who was backing toward the hallway. "Ask Young Galahad. He ought to be just too thrilled to tell you all about it." She began to sob bitterly.

Judith touched Hugh's arm and he stopped with her at the door. "Thanks again, Hugh, more than I can say. You really are a Galahad."

Hugh blushed. The high color ran up into his temples and shaded off into his red hair, giving him an unforgettable look. Judith standing there had an irresistible impulse. She stood up on tiptoes and kissed him.

Judith watched him as he walked swiftly back to his car and climbed in. He had not said another word. Eleanor could tell them anything she wished. Judith had a sudden inclination to giggle. For if she had ever seen a man want to spank a girl, that had been the picture of Hugh glaring down at Eleanor a moment ago. Eleanor was propped up on her elbow now, glaring into the hall. When Judith came back into the room she dropped back into the pillows and her eyes dared them to ask questions.

Blair stood up and said, "Do you know where Johnny is?"

"Why, no, of course not!" Eleanor sprang to her feet. "Isn't he here? Where should he be at this time of night?"

Blair only looked at her pityingly, but Judith said gently: "He went to look for you, Eleanor."

Eleanor's face turned white again. She slumped back into the divan, but she did not cry this time. "I'm sorry, Blair. You and Johnny have done so much for me. But it's time I was getting out and letting you live your own lives. I was going to take the two o'clock for the East when that darned Hugh walked into the station. He came to get a letter off to his girl."

Judith's eyes widened in surprise. Hugh had a girl who meant enough to him that he'd write her and take the letter to the station after midnight for the train?

Eleanor went on, "He argued with me. Said I was still tight. I didn't really drink that much, though, just had enough to make me act silly, early in the evening. Anyway, when I said I wouldn't come back to talk it over with you, he picked me up and carried me to his car and held me in by brute strength."

Blair giggled in spite of herself, and wished Johnny could have heard the tale.

"Let's go to bed," Blair said.

"But what about Johnny?" Eleanor asked.

"He'll be calling in a while to see if you've come back, I'll wager," Judith suggested.

Blair went out to the car with Judith and Eleanor went on upstairs, carrying her traveling case and looking dejected.

Johnny drove up while Judith was starting her car. He grimly got out and said, "Well, Judy, I know we can always count on you. Hugh hunted me up and sent me home with the news."

Blair said, "Well, I think Mack did a good job for you, Johnny. Eleanor looked spanked!"

Judith laughed as Blair told him about the scene with Hugh. "Little brat," murmured Johnny. "Well, I'll see you pretty soon, Judy. Think you can get by with three hours sleep?"

"Certainly!" Judith smiled. "See you in the morning." She drove down the silent street back towards home, and fatigue rushed over her. She didn't bother about putting Old Liz up for the remainder of the night.

It wasn't until she was in bed and lying there thinking that she realized what the throbbing of her tired head was trying to get through to her. Jinx must have pretended to love Eleanor, too, or she would not be so desperate over him. Doubt shook her, and she lay there suddenly sick at heart.

Coupon No. 17

The baby-last pumps in the photograph above combine all the foregoing qualities. They're low, with plenty of room for every one of five toes. (Don't smile. There are many shoes that haven't.) They're the kind of leather that glows with abundant polishings. The style is graceful and right with everything from suits to print afternoon dresses. We show them in lizard, the leather with the iron constitution. These are the color of old sherry, a perfect complement for the rest of the spectrum. They also come in red or green, or black patent leather, and in navy blue or black calf . . . around $13.

The matching pouch bag is the handsomest article of its kind on which we've clapped an eye. It is almost capacious enough to travel in. About $14 in lizard . . . about $5 in calf or patent leather.

The problem of which shoes to buy with that priceless coupon is almost a worse dilemma than that of the child with a shiny copper penny on his first shopping tour.

No. 17 is to see you through spring and summer, because in June you will be able to get another pair. Consequently there is no moral obligation and not much common sense in going all out for a pair of weighty utilitarian brogues unless, of course, you are accustomed to wear nothing else. With this fair city's midsummer heat richocheting up from the pavements, a lighter, airier foot-gear will be much more satisfactory.

Walking, though patriotic, should be as pleasant and painless as possible. Therefore, we want to go on record again in favor of low heels. There's no question that for any amount of serious (not necessarily grim) walking, the closer you are to the ground, the better. Actually, the important thing is that in its natural position with enough curve to support the arch, the foot is much better able to carry the weight of the body.

For the next couple of months you are probably living in your suits. The latter part of May will see you in dresses without topcoats. The shoes you buy now should be equally appropriate with both.

Would a Woman of Genuine Charm and Refinement Make Smug Comparison Between Self and Others Less Happily Gifted? Widowed Worker Says No

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I felt like exploding when I read in "Homemaker's" letter of February 18 the following statement: "For real refinement and charm, the average business girl cannot compare with the average home woman." The questions immediately came to my mind: Does she know the meaning of charm and refinement? Could she offer herself as proof of her complacent statement? Would a woman who did truly possess genuine charm and refinement draw such invidious comparison between herself (or her kind) and those less fortunately gifted? And, finally, what makes her think that because a woman works outside the home, from preference or necessity, she is a low-grade human being? As a matter of fact, social finesse is a first requisite for dealing successfully with people en masse; and the woman who lacks natural grace and sympathy gets short shrift in the business world.

The reason I took offense at her tactless, unfounded remark is because I was once a "homemaker," too; and those were the happiest, most carefree days of my life. But when I was left a widow with a small son to support, I was obliged to find a job. Does "Homemaker" believe that charm and refinement are artificially cultivated forms of behavior which can only be practiced by the rich and leisurely? And that they cannot be exercised by the woman who must wrest a livelihood for herself and dependents? What makes her think that feminine sensibilities evaporate in the atmosphere of the business office? I should think that acceptance of responsibility would enrich a woman's understanding of life and make her a bigger and finer person, in consequence. And certainly it is a sense of duty in most instances which causes women to become wage-earners. Yet is is such women as these that "Homemaker" snobbishly condemns. I just don't get her angle!

Once-Sheltered Woman Speaks Plainly to Wives

I think it is time somebody told these sheltered, self-concerned, clinging vine homemakers that we salaried women didn't enter the business world in pursuit of pleasure, nor even from choice, in many cases. And that we don't think of our jobs in terms of catering obsequiously to the whims of other women's husbands, and that it occurs to few of us, that there is any romantic "kick" to be got out of associating with men in the office. If we happen to enjoy our work, it is because we are sensibly resolved to do so; because that is the only attitude that makes for good work. Yet here is the homemaker, with heavy advantages on her side, looking at us with jealous disapproval. When I hear homemakers complain of their tasks (as I often do), I think with envy of their lot: Of their much greater opportunities to lead a really satisfying life; and of how little they seem to know what it's all about.

As for her emphasis on "office parties" to which wives are not invited—could it be that wives are excluded because it's tacitly understood by all concerned that most wives feel themselves so much "above" the working woman, in charm and refinement, that they couldn't possibly mingle on an equal footing? I marvel to discover that there really are such smug people in the world as the woman who wrote that letter. It's hard to believe. And I feel sorry for her, and also her husband.

Has Married-Man Friends And Is Highly Respectable

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a business woman, unmarried, with 15 years' experience (dating back to my teens) in responsible jobs. During these years I have had dozens of firm friendships with men I met in the course of my work. Many of these men were married. But so far as I was concerned, they were business associates, in whose private life I had no personal interest; therefore I treated them as I preferred to be treated, namely: As a congenial fellow being. And those who learned to know me best respected me most. Certainly none of them ever considered me a "girl of easy virtue," simply because I might occasionally have lunch or dinner or a "coke" with them. I make this clear because in Monday's column one of your correspondents defined "girls as easy virtue" as those who "tolerate any kind of intimacy with a married man." If she had restricted her definition to girls who go in for "affairs," that would have been another story.

For some years, I had supervision of a group of employes, varying in numbers from 20 to 90 persons, both men and women. It was part of my responsibility to analyze and correct personnel problems—many of which purportedly developed out of "office flirtations." I discovered that in 90 per cent of such cases, the real trouble stemmed from malicious and unwarranted gossip, based on snap judgment of essentially innocent behavior. My experience has been that persons who refuse to admit the possibility of clean friendship between men and women are persons who have an unwholesome attitude toward the opposite sex, and who read evil into much they see. They lack intelligence, self control, humor, social experience and, above all, a sense of proportion.

Her Careerist Mother Is a Model of Propriety

My father's and mother's devotion to each other during their 30 years' marriage has been remarked by all who know them. Both of them held positions for many years in which they made many friends of the opposite sex. But this fact didn't interfere with their marriage, nor injure their standing in the community. On the contrary, my mother, who has literally thousands of men friends of every age, in every walk of life, married and single, is honored as a model of fine character, throughout the length and breadth of our home State.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S WARTIME GUIDE

By Martha Ellyn

With supplies of meat being limited, it keeps the cook's mind whirling to know what she can serve. The ever popular frankfurter is still with us. The price is usually around 35 to 39 cents a pound. And there is an average of 10 frankfurters to a pound.

Why not make a dish that uses this meat and potatoes? Hot potato salad and frankfurters is a dish that is nutritious and appealing. This is the way to make it:

HOT POTATO SALAD WITH FRANKFURTERS

Boil 6 medium-sized unpeeled potatoes until tender. Dice 6 slices salt pork, then fry until crisp. Remove from skillet. Brown in the fat ½ cup chopped onion, 5 to 6 frankfurters, skinned and thinly sliced. Peel cooked potatoes, then cut into ½ inch dice. Add potatoes and pork to the frankfurters and onion, then add 1-3 cup vinegar, 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped, 1½ to 2 teaspoons salt and mix well. Stir gently over low heat until all ingredients are thoroughly heated through. Serve on platter garnished with lettuce. Serves 6.

Fresh fruit can be used for dessert, accompanied by some cookies. Pecan Straws are crunchy bits that will be enjoyed. The following is a recipe for making the straws:

PECAN STRAWS

Sife together 2 cups sifted, enriched flour, ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in ⅓ cup shortening. Beat 1 egg and add to it ¼ cup cold water. Add to the flour mixture, stirring only until flour is moistened. Roll out ⅛-inch thick. Brush with milk and sprinkle with ¼ cup sugar and ½ cup chopped pecans. Cut in strips 1x3 inches. Bake on greased baking sheet in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about 15 minutes. Makes 3 dozen cookies.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

When the Shoe Didn't Fit

To the aid of the shoe situation has come Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, with a Big Idea. "I am going to clean all past shoe mistakes out of women's closets," the president of the Do Something About It League announced yesterday at her press conference.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"The Government is talking grandiloquently about getting into repair shops 50 million pairs of shoes now sitting idle in shoe closets," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "Now, I say the immediate thing to do is to get into use the 100 million pairs of shoes women have bought and never worn."

The reformer announced she was going to ask Congress to establish a mammoth shoe exchange at which women could barter shoes they couldn't wear for those they could wear. "Nearly every woman's closet is full of shoes that don't fit her feet, or her needs, or her taste," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "They are emblems of her own folly that she has tried unsuccessfully to forget. As these are virtually new, they should be dug out and the right feet found for them."

All Women Yield to Vanity

"Why on earth do women buy shoes they don't want," asked a chicken and garden editor.

"Why does the sun rise?" countered Mrs. DeGoofey. "There is no woman alive who is still out of a wheel chair who doesn't make mistakes in shoe buying. Just look in any woman's closet at the stacks of shoe boxes that are never opened.

"There is the pair of black suede pumps that didn't feel quite right, and that she wasn't sure she wanted, but that she finally took because they made her feet look dainty—especially when she sat and crossed her legs—and also because she figured she could always take a taxi when she wore them.

"Then there are the good sensible oxfords she was going to walk in, but which she took in a last too narrow because they made her feet look more slender; there are the cut-out patent leathers she bought in early spring before her feet had felt the expansive influence of summer; there are the evening slippers she was assured could be dyed a maroon to match her evening gown, and which turned out a brilliant orange instead; there is the pair of green lizard pumps she bought for summer and which failed to go with anything she had, and what is more made her feet look like a snake crawling throught the grass.

Shoe Salesmen Are Persuasive

"There's the pair of spectator pumps that never would stay on her heel or that cut her instep, and which she took merely because she was tired and discouraged and also ashamed to walk out without buying after the salesman had gone to so much trouble; there are the two pairs she bought at a sale for $2.88 each, hurriedly picking them off a table where other women were pawing and grabbing; there's the fancy pair of slippers with spike heels that she bought in a sudden determination to be frivolous and that always felt so uncomfortable she constantly made excuses to avoid wearing them.

"There's the pair of bright red wedgies she bought after her friends all told her she was entirely too sedate in her clothes, and that wouldn't stay on the back of her feet; there's the pair of blue kid pumps she bought for her Easter outfit and which she thought would adjust to her feet—and which never did; there's the pair of $3.98 oxfords she bought in a sudden fit of economy after she decided she could wear cheap shoes as well as anybody and it was all foolishness this thing of salesmen telling her she had an expensive foot.

"There's the pair she knew was a mistake the minute she got out of the store but which she hated to take back after the salesman had been so nice, and which she delayed doing anything about until it was too late; there's the pair—but why go on? You get the idea, I'm sure. Now these costly shoe mistakes give many women a sense of secret guilt and often cause them to walk blocks when they are exhausted, in an effort to save car tokens because they want to make up the money they have squandered. If these misfits could be put into use, not only would a lot of shoe leather be conserved but a lot of women would be freed of their guilt complexes in regard to former false steps."

"Have you yourself any shoe mistakes in your closet?" asked a gossip columnist.

"Young man," replied Mrs. DeGoofey, "do I look like a woman who is beyond either vanity or hope?"

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

'Say It With Service, Not Words, for Our Hero Is Modest'—Says Mrs. Moore

Active Sister of Henry Luce Is USO Leader

By Peggy Preston

MRS. MAURICE T. MOORE

"The American hero is a modest fellow."

Because Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, vice chairman of USO and head of that organization's national women's committee, believes this to be a truism, she has let it be her guide in planning the activities carried out under the USO banner.

In town for a quick trip on matters pertaining to the organization she serves, attractive, vital Mrs. Moore, sister of publisher Henry R. Luce, elaborated yesterday on what she considers the moving spirit back of the USO program.

"An American boy is embarrassed if we tell him in so many words that we are proud of him," she said. "And so through USO we don't say it in words, we say it in every small personal service that we can render; in words and deeds of encouragement. These are reminders that we are back of him 100 per cent and that we are humble in the realization that we can stay at home in comfort, while he is out there at the ends of the earth fighting for us."

Although her administrative post keeps her at the New York headquarters most of the time, Mrs. Moore has managed to make many visits in the field since taking over her job last May.

Talks With American Soldiers

Naturally friendly, and eager to get at the crux of the problem, she has joined club hostesses from Maine to California and talked with America's fighting men.

"Usually they just want to talk about their home towns," she said. "Or about their families, their high school triumphs or their plans for life after the war. But sometimes they bring us real problems and then is when we need trained, wise volunteer workers."

Long before the USO laid claim to Mrs. Moore's services, her talent for humanitarian works had found outlets in a variety of organizations. For some time she was a member of the board of the Y. W. C. A. and as chairman of their foreign division, supervised their work in 53 countries.

Among her other activities has been her work with her pet project, United China Relief. As chairman of the New York women's division she has put over several successful drives and at present is playing hookey, as she puts it, from her USO work, to help stage a rally next Tuesday in New York for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

"It is to be in Madison Square Garden and it is going to be a rally to end all rallies, I assure you," she said, explaining that her Washington visit must be brief this time because of her divided interest for the time being.

Received Early Education in China

Mrs. Moore's interest in China springs from the fact that she was born in Shantung Province, the daughter of the late Presbyterian missionary, Henry W. Luce, and lived there until she was 16 years old. Like China's first lady, Mrs. Moore is a graduate of Wellesley College. While in Washington Mrs. Moore is the guest of her sister-in-law, Representative Clare Booth Luce.

Since her particular job with the USO concerns the women workers, Mrs. Moore has outlined a set of rules that she recommends to her hundreds and hundreds of volunteer workers who do their jobs at the clubs following a hard day's work in an office.

She recommends these simple rules to all war-time workers and submits them herewith: "Don't make your work harder than it is; don't be a worrier; don't waste off-duty hours; don't be afraid of the doctor. Take advantage of the physical check-up opportunities in your plant or office; don't eat foolishly, and don't be a wastrel with your strength."

Chinese Reception List Is Closed

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei, deluged with requests for invitations to the reception tomorrow afternoon in honor of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, regret to announce that the invitation list has been closed.

They appreciate the interests of the many friends of China, but they have been forced to limit the guest list to members of the congressional circle, official society, the chiefs of mission and military, naval and air attaches of embassies and legations.

Norma Louise Thompson and Oswald Berg, Jr., Are Married

At a candlelight ceremony last evening in the Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church, Miss Norma Louise Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thompson of Washington, became the bride of Oswald Berg, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Berg of Lennep, Mont. The Rev. Robert C. Kell officiated at the 8 o'clock service.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in heavy white faille taffeta, with tight-fitting bodice and high round neckline, and full skirt ending in a long train. Her finger-tip veil was held to her hair by a cap of pearls and she carried a bouquet of white gladioli and sweet peas. Mrs. Albert Sansbury, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore fitted pale blue faille taffeta, with a veiled hat of blue ostrich feathers, and carried jonquils and narcissus. Bridesmaids were Miss Edwina Hambleton, Miss Janet Scott, Miss Edith Dunford and Miss Margaret Curtin. They were gowned like the matron of honor in darker shades of blue.

Robert Pennel of Kokomo, Ind., was the best man, and the ushers were Robert H. Thompson, Erling Thormod, Russel Perkins and John McCantee. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Following a trip in the North the couple will make their home in Colonial Village.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Maryland and the bridegroom was graduated from Washington State College in architectural engineering. He is now an engineer in the Bureau of Ships in the Navy Department.

She's at It Again—This Time It's a 'Land Army' She Wants

Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers, Having Started WAAC'S On Their Way, Says 'Farm Corps' Is Next Need

Having seen her brainchild, the WAACS, safely on the way to fame and success, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts has turned her legislative attention to the soil and the labor problem thereof.

Says Mrs. Rogers of her "Land Army" bill introduced this week in the House: "The idea of training a voluntary 'farm corps' was passed on to me by those who know the situation best—the farmers themselves."

Having harbored the notion for the mobilization, training and operation of such a corps since the start of the war, Mrs. Rogers felt the propitious moment for its introduction had arrived this week, with the announced cuts in canned foods. Her bill aims at providing the country with fresh farm produce.

Under the terms of the bill, the accent will be on youth. Boys and girls from 16 to 18 years old may be recruited and given training in farm work at agricultural colleges, expenses to be paid by the Government. Upon graduation, the recruits will be given uniforms and provided with suitable camp homes while working. The matter of their wages on the land, however, will be handled by the farmer employers themselves.

"I think it is essential that these young people be strong physically," Mrs. Rogers says in discussing the bill. "And physical examinations would be given each volunteer. However, the project is a healthful one in itself and I think the young people will benefit from the experience while serving their country at the same time."

Though city-bred, Representative Rogers has long interested herself in agricultural matters. Her district in Massachusetts comprises the soil-rich Fifth Middlesex District, and her native county of Middlesex is the largest agricultural county in the State. Last summer, active, alert Mrs. Rogers traveled back and forth from her District to Washington every few weeks, and it was during these trips that she became convinced of the need for legislative aid on the farm-labor problem.

Bolivian Chaplain A Visitor Here

A soldier and a priest will be honored at a luncheon to be given tomorrow by the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla. But there will be only one honor guest, for Lieut. Col. Luis Alberto Tapia is Chief of Chaplains of the Bolivia Army.

Here at the invitation of the State Department, Colonel Tapia will be the guest of honor at luncheon today of the Cultural Relations Division of the Department of State. He will remain in Washington several weeks as the guest of the acting rector of Catholic University, the Rev. P. J. McCormick. He will then go on a tour to the West Coast with stopovers en route and will spend a short time in New York. There, he will present to Mayor LaGuardia a statuette called the "Little Man of Good Luck," a present from the citizens of La Paz to those of New York.

Colonel Tapia is a former member of the Bolivian Chamber of Deputies. He has been a professor of philosophy and history in Bolivian Colleges.

Dr. Horgan Commissioned In Army

Dr. Edmund Horgan, of Washington, and Ashleigh, Delaplane, Va., has received his commission as lieutenant colonel in the United States Army Medical Corps and will leave March 2 for New Orleans, where he will be on duty at LaGarde General Hospital. Mrs. Horgan will accompany her husband, closing Ashleigh for an indefinite period.

Colonel and Mrs. Horgan have been making their home in Virginia for several years. When Gen. George Patton resigned as Master of the Cobbler Hunt, Colonel Horgan was named to succeed him and until last season carried on as M. F. H. alone. Increasing work in his office, however, left him less time to devote to the sport and he asked Prentice S. Porter to become joint master of the hunt. Mr. Prentice now a lieutenant in the United States Navy, in turn, bestowed his title to Mrs. Prentice when he left for service overseas, so now it seems Mrs. Prentice is left to carry on as master.

Several farewell parties by members of the Cobbler Hunt will be given for Colonel and Mrs. Horgan before their departure for New Orleans.

Virginia Men In Services Home on Leave

From Army and Navy posts scattered over the country, a number of Virginia service men have come home to spend their furloughs.

Lieut. Christopher M. Greer, jr. of Upperville is back from Fort Warren, Wyo., where he attended Officers Training School, and is spending a few days with Mrs. Greer before coming to Washington where he will be on duty. Lieutenant and Mrs. Greer hunted with the Piedmont Hunt which met at Willisville on Tuesday.

Comdr. DeLancey Nicoll, jr., U. S. N., and Mrs. Nicoll are at their home near Marshall, Va., from Norfolk, Va., where Commander Nicoll is stationed. Lieut. Henry Frost, jr., U. S. A., who received his commission at Fort Knox, Ky., last week, has been spending a week's leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost at Frostfields, their home near Middleburg. He left on Tuesday for Fort Polk, La.

From Fort Melburn, Fla., where he has been training, has come Ensign Robert Bentley Lyon, U. S. Naval Air Corps, to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Nelson Lyon at Black Oaks, their home at Purcellville.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek Attends Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference; Discusses China's Needs; Says Her Country 'Poor but Proud,' Wants Help but 'Not Charity'

"We are a very old Nation . . . We realize that spiritual values are eternal and that each of us can live but a few years, in comparison . . . But the nation must go on."

Thus did Mme. Chiang Kai-shek explain the Chinese people's indomitable spirit in the face of a foe who might otherwise have been a conqueror long ago.

The answer came, along with many others, at Mrs. Roosevelt's weekly press conference, where China's most famous woman was an honor guest.

In the course of the conference, which lasted less than an hour, Mme. Chiang expressed herself on a variety of subjects—ranging all the way from women's rights to woman's place at the peace table after the military victory is won.

MME. CHIANG KAI-SHEK

Of Women's Rights—And Privileges

On the question of equal rights for women Mme. Chiang said: "I have never known brains to have any sex." And then she added that women should, however, be more concerned with their responsibilities than their privileges.

Of women's place at the peace table: Mme. Chiang expressed herself with even more force, but made it clear her statements were not in any sense "a dig." She said in effect that as men had failed in the past to make a lasting peace, she was convinced that women certainly should be given a chance to see what they could do about it.

On the subject of how the United States can help China: Ammunition is badly needed, of course, she said. China has the manpower—flesh and blood—to get rid of the enemy in her part of the world. She must have war materials; she should be able to draw more of what she needs from the Nation that President Roosevelt has designated as "the arsenal of democracy." Mme. Chiang went on to say in this regard that the Chinese people, "poor but proud," did not want charity, however; that they were willing and prepared, to give value received; that they took their position as partners in the cause of the United Nations very seriously; that they would continue to contribute their part, and more, to the struggle at hand; and that they did not expect America to provide food for them after the war.

Of her own plans for the future: "My job is in China," she said. And she implied that she would be returning there within a few weeks. She added that she had neither the time nor the strength to meet all the people here that she would like to see; and she said that on doctor's orders, she is being forced to decline numerous invitations. She will stay in Washington until Tuesday of next week, and then will be off to New York.

Divulges Secret Of Endurance

The remaining part of the conference was devoted to a brief discussion of Mme. Chiang's work with Chinese orphans and on behalf of the millions of families that have been broken up since the beginning of the war. The secret of China's marvelous power of endurance, she said, is in the universal feeling there is much more at stake than even the nation itself; that the future of the entire race depends on the outcome of the current conflict.

In the course of her answers to a wide variety of questions, Mme. Chiang took time out to pay tribute to America's "Flying Tigers," of which she was an honorary commander, and to Gen. Claire Chennault, under whose training a vast corps of U. S. aviators have aided China materially.

Every time I see Mme. Chiang I am more thoroughly impressed than before with her sincerity, intelligence, ability and warmth. A slip of a woman, who looks as if a mere breeze could blow her away, she is nevertheless—as her career has proved—a strong personality who can weather the fiercest storm.

At her second meeting with American reporters since she has been a guest at the White House, Mme. Chiang wore a satin embossed black Chinese robe, its side-slit skirt lined in turquoise to match the piping around the collar and yoke. Her earrings, ring, bracelet and the buttons of her dress were carnelian, and her high-heeled black sandals were piped in gold. An aviation insignia, studded in diamonds, was on her left shoulder, adding a final stunning accent to her exquisite attire.

Mme. Chiang Called China's 'Joan of Arc'

While I'm on the subject of Mme. Chiang—as who isn't these days?—I'd like to mention a letter I received yesterday from a member of an antiaircraft unit now stationed in Washington. The writer referred to my recent list of the ten outstanding women of the modern world and took me to task because I failed to list them in one, two, three order. "So I am writing you now to ask," his letter continues, "that you show cause why Mme. Chiang Kai-shek shouldn't be listed as the No. 1 Woman as of today.

"Not only because she is partly guiding the destinies of the largest aggregation of human beings on this planet is she great, but she has emerged out of this age of strife and confusion, crystal clear in character, in purpose, and in will to achieve. The Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang have succeeded in cementing into a unity of purpose and action 400 million individualists, and have kept them so united during four and one-half years of the most devasting war in history."

The writer goes on to call attention to a magazine excerpt which refers to Mme. Chiang as China's "Joan of Arc" and the idol of every little Chinese girl. "I know of no other woman of which all this can be said," the letter continues. "And then again right before our own eyes, this little Mei-ling Soong stood before the Congress of the United States and delivered one of the most dramatic and moving speeches heard in similar halls since Patrick Henry. We have women who can make speeches on international problems, on social reforms, on ideals, but none of them have behind them, as does Mme. Chiang, 'the soul of a nation,' the last five words of her speech."

Well, Lieutenant Wright, that's going overboard for Mme. Chiang in a big way. But I must say I approve—heartily; and I believe anybody else who has seen or heard her would do the same. I might add, in case you've forgotten, that while I declined to name my "10 outstanding" women in 1, 2, 3 order—I did put her first on the list. And that, it would seem, is going far enough.

Tito Guizar Plays for Mexico's Envoy

There's always time for music at the Mexican Embassy. Often a fiesta will go on 'til early morning.

It was that way the other evening when the famous Tito Guizar brought his guitar up to the embassy after his performance at the Stage Door Canteen. Senora Guizar, who is as musical as her husband, was also there, and the Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera invited members of the staff and their wives to join them. And—nobody left 'til the clock chimed four.

Tito Guizar played and sang everything from opera to the simple folk songs of his own Mexico. He sang for the first time several compositions which are soon to be published, written in collaboration with Senora Guizar, who wrote the words, and his accompanist, who wrote the music.

Another composer in the group that evening whose work won applause was Luis Castillo Najera, son of the Ambassador and an Attache of the embassy. He's an accomplished pianist but he's new in the role of composer. A Bolero and a Sonata, are his first contributions to the realm of music and both received enthusiastic comment from Senor Guizar, who played them to the gathering.

It's a pleasure to meet an artist like Tito Guizar. He is completely free from artistic temperament, delights in making people happy through his music, and is ever ready and willing whenever he is asked.

Frank Warings Hosts at Supper

The head of the Indian Supply Mission, K. C. Mahindra, was the guest of honor at an informal buffet supper last evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Waring in their apartment on Twentieth Street.

Sharing honors with Mr. Mahindra was K. A. D. Naorogi, who arrived last week from India to assist the supply mission. He is the purchasing agent for Tata Iron & Steel. Among the guests were the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, the Philippine Resident Commissioner, J. M. Elizalde, Dr. Dana Durand, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Wilbur Diehl, Mrs. G. Walter Munroe and Mrs. John Davies, jr.

Spanish Envoy Gives Luncheon

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas entertained at luncheon yesterday at the embassy for Col. Juan Beigbeder, who is in Washington from Madrid.

Colonel Beigbeder was Foreign Minister under General Franco from 1939 to 1940. He is here to make a technical study of the United States Army.

Litvinoff Advises Those Worried Over Russia

THE State Department isn't announcing it, but several diplomats from the smaller European states—in addition to Finland—are coming in to express worry over Russian victories. These have-their-cake-and-eat-it-too diplomats want Hitler to be defeated, but don't want Russia to win.

Some of the State Department boys, among them Assistant Secretary Adolf Berle, secretly agree.

Best answer to this fear was expressed inadvertently by Soviet Ambassador Litvinoff in talking with a prominent businessman from the Middlewest. Litvinoff asked him what people in that part of the country thought about Russia.

"I'm going to be perfectly frank with you," replied the Midwesterner. "People in my part of the country admire the great fight Russia has made against Germany and they have the highest praise of your army. But they fear the spread of communism after the war."

Ambassador Litvinoff replied thoughtfully that there was no ground for such fears, that all Russia wanted to do was to defeat the Axis as quickly as possible, then live in peace within her own boundaries.

"However," added Litvinoff, "if the fear of Russia in western Europe really worries you, there is one very easy way to dispose of it."

"What is that?" asked the gentleman from the West.

"The American and British armies should march into Berlin first."

Labor Leader Exit

ONE of the A. F. of L. big shots, John Coyne, president of the powerful building trades department, is about to get the axe.

Coyne's building trades department represents about 1,700,000 organized workmen in the carpenters, plumbers, electrical workers and other A. F. L. building trades unions. But he will be ousted at the next meeting of the executive council in May. He was voted a leave of absence after the last meeting in Miami, where some members didn't approve his behavior.

Richard Gray, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. L. Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers Union is top candidate to succeed him.

Capital Chaff

BEFORE Connecticut Congresswoman Clare Luce delivered her maiden speech panning the British on future air routes, her text was carefully blue penciled by the State Department. They did not object to criticism of the British, figuring that hands-across-the-sea policy was strong enough to take it. But they did cross out some of Clare's caustic words about Russia not giving us more cooperation on airplane routes . . . Stanch Roosevelt-rooter Tom Berry, former governor of South Dakota, has been appointed to the Farm Credit Administration despite the vigorous objection of Farm Credit Boss A. G. Black. It was White House Adviser Eugene Casey, an increasing power in Democratic farm politics, who put him across . . . Thomas Jefferson once predicted that the fleets of Brazil and the United States would ride together as brothers. Now that this has happened, the Rockefeller Committee is working on a movie featuring Jefferson's prophecy.

Little Aid to China

JUST back from Chungking, Gen. "Hap" Arnold, chief of the Air Force, gave a glowing report to Secretary of War Stimson regarding Chinese resourcefulness in battling the Japs. He was amazed and full of praise for Chinese ingenuity in repairing planes, landing in cow pastures and conserving fuel.

As far as General Arnold is concerned he would like to send the Chinese a lot more planes—though in the past he has not been too keen about it. (Incidentally, one reason for sending him to China was to win him over to the Chinese cause).

However, despite Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's graceful appearance here, despite Hap Arnold's enthusiasm, despite the President's public statement's, China is not going to get anything much in the way of supplies.

Reasons are: (1) the impossibility of opening the Burma Road now with the monsoon season only a few weeks off; (2) the absolute necessity of cleaning up Africa and preparing for a drive against Hitler in Europe; (3) Chinese political dissension which requires too many arms for personal armies.

Some war weapons will be flown over the Himalayas, but not much more than in the past.

Cure for Typhus

BY WAY of London has come word that the Germans have evolved a cure for the dread disease typhus. If so, it is a discovery meaning the lives of thousands of men in the Eastern Front. In 1914 "General Typhus" was responsible for more lives than machinegun fire, and from time to time it has ravaged the Balkans, Russia and Eastern Europe ever since.

The German cure was discovered by a Dr. Van Meerdock and is a combination of atebrin and plasmochin. United States Public Health officials have their fingers crossed regarding the cure, but British medical circles seem to be favorably impressed.

Broad-Beamed Government

NINETY-SIX new mahogany chairs are being made by Senate carpenters and will be installed in the Senate when the WPB will give priority rating for the brass casters. The Senators feel that brass is necessary . . . Most Senate chairs were installed when the Capitol was built, and the beefier solons use them with trepidation.

Gloria Swanson Joins 'Priorities' for Local Run

"PRIORITIES OF 1942," when it reaches the stage of the National Theater next Monday night to inaugurate a two-week engagement that will encompass six matinees—6, count 'em, 6—will not be quite so topheavy with comedians as it has been up to now.

GLORIA SWANSON

Mr. Reuben Rabinovitch, the itinerant cymbal-whanger for the revue, leaped back into town from Philadelphia yesterday afternoon for the sole purpose of imparting word to the drama desks that there "will be some changes made" in the cast before the E Street opening. For presumably adequate reasons not disclosed, Bert Wheeler and Hank Ladd have terminated—or are about to terminate—their association with the tuneful enterprise and will be supplanted by an artiste the luster of whose name should add even greater bedazzlement to the marquee. Gloria Swanson, no less.

One of the most glamorous stars of an earlier day of the cinema—beginning with Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties and progressing through the golden bathtub era of Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular romances—Miss Swanson has come down to the present still one of the most magnetic personalities before the public. She was last visible on the screen, if memory serves, with Adolphe Menjou in "Father Takes a Wife," in which her illustrious talents betrayed no diminution.

She will be surrounded by Harold J. Kennedy, Maida Reade, Lillian Bronson and Belle Gardner in her contribution to "Priorities."

And another thing. When Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals open on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater today, Washingtonians will be missing a native son and one of the theater's outstanding masters of pantomimic comedy—little Johnny Puleo. Remember him, the little fellow who was always being shoved around? There was a time, some months back, when Johnny was intent on organizing his own harmonica band. That project, however, proved not to be wholly feasible at precisely that time for a variety of reasons and so was dropped. But not Johnny. The canny Mr. Minevitch, aware of his superior talents, booked the diminutive Puleo into Sid Grauman's musical production of "Highlights of 1943," now playing a successful engagement at the Alcazar Theater in San Francisco. But there still is a "little fellow" with the Rascals coming into the Capitol. It will be interesting to note whether or not Johnny really has a serious rival in a field that can boast precious few stars. Jimmy Savo is the only other one I can think of at the moment.

On Friday morning, the Warner executives are unspooling "Air Force" for the guys and gals of the drama desks in the belief that in this subject of air warfare in the South Pacific since Pearl Harbor they have one of the picture industry's all-time greats. Jack Lait of the New York Daily Mirror seems to be of the same opinion: "What is left now for future flying pictures to shoot is a problem for the industry. This one has swept it all up." We shall see what we shall see—which ought to be plenty.

The second program in the "Foreign Feature Cinema" series will be on February 28, at 7:15 p. m., at Hotel 2400, and will be dedicated to Czecho-Slovakia. "Janosik" will be the featured film, supplemented by "Vlatava," a short subject in color, completed a short step ahead of the Nazi invasion.

HEDDA HOPPER

And Won't Jean Be Surprised!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 24.—Fred MacMurray has done something for Jean Arthur that she knows nothing about—until she reads this. They needed a baby picture of Jean for an insert in "The More the Merrier," so Fred gave them one of his own, taken in a seashell! Sure, they used it. . . .

JEAN ARTHUR

Mark Hellinger and Jack Warner were doing handsprings after a sneak preview of Eddie Cantor in "Thank Your Lucky Stars." Cantor's hot as a firecracker, and another major studio is talking to him. . . . Lou Nova, who's been dying to act, gets a chance in the Kay Kyser picture. Metro's boasting so much about Kay you'd think it had discovered him and made him what he is today. Wouldn't Metro just love to say, "This is our Kay Kyser," like Paramount about Bob Hope.

Another Convert

Zasu Pitts has an offer from Henry Duffy to do a revival of "The Bat," in Detroit, Philadelphia, and Boston. Little Mary Lebus, a Kentucky deb, who acted in Zasu's play, is acting as her stand-in. Zasu, who has traveled from coast to coast in her first stage play, is crazy about the theater and wants to return. . . . Phyllis Loughton (Mrs. George Seaton) is expecting an heir late this summer. She'll accompany George back to New York when he takes the completed script of "Song of Bernadette," which he did, for the approval of its author.

Ever Seen a Dream Walking?

I saw two dancing in "Lady in the Dark"—Ginger Rogers and Don Loper. If the camera records it as it happened, you'll be shouting, too. Set was a huge garden with a gold pergola at one end—gold horse and Jon Hall at the other. Bare trees without foliage and clouds covering the entire stage (made of dry ice and chemicals) and enveloping dancers to the knees made them look as though they really were dancing on clouds—which they really were. Before going into the number Ginger put on her wig. First it was glued on, then pinned. Then I'll be darned if the bangs weren't sewed on with needle and thread. That's how we keep our girls looking beautiful from any position. There's been so much discussion about cost of picture. Its budget is three million dollars. But when Barney Balaban saw some of it on the screen, he said, "They asked for escapist pictures. That is it." But the thing that's got them winging are those $5000 sets. They'd completed one, but forgot about backdrop. Paint for it would have run the cost $600 more. They obeyed priority laws, so it cost them $2500 extra to have women work four days and applique velvet and satin on the backdrop. No ceiling on labor—just cost of material for the set. No wonder movie producers have ulcers!

Could Be

Since the Susan Hayward and John Carroll romance is off so quickly, I'm beginning to believe it was a dream-up by Republic. Susan isn't the least bit upset. She's New York bound to read a play for Max Gordon . . . Bob Preston receives his commission in the air forces tomorrow . . . Roscoe Karns was saying good-by to his son, Todd, who was off for officer training school . . . After many upsies and downsies, the Herbert Brenons celebrated their thirty-ninth wedding anniversary together, with Niece Eileen from New York as guest of honor . . . Dale Evans, Edgar Bergen's singer, got her first lead in "Swing Your Partner" for Republic. If she makes the grade, she'll be signed on term contract.

Bogart's Kissing Alienates Youths

Hollywood. — Humphrey Bogart learned recently that he has just lost—temporarily—27 fans. The information came from Jerry Quincannon, 12, of New York City, who wrote, with a slight mixture of indignation and pathos, that he was the president of a one-block "Humphrey Bogart is Our Hero" club.

"We didn't mind it too much when you had to kiss Mary Astor in 'Across the Pacific,'" wrote Jerry, "because we figured that was what the story said you had to do. But we went to see 'Casablanca' yesterday and we gave up. We want you in parts where you play tough guys. We don't want you kissing girls like Ingrid Bergman. You looked like you liked it. We won't go to see your pictures until you get tough again."

Bogart hastily replied assuring his youthful audience that he is nothing but tough, albeit not a heavy, in "Action in the North Atlantic."

Soviet Musical A Hit at Little

A wonderful people these Russians. The entire world has paid tribute to their gallantry in battle, while discriminating moviegoers have long been aware that the more recent Soviet films have been made under wartime conditions in which even the actors have risked their lives to appear before the cameras.

But yesterday, at the Little Theater, those surprising Soviets added another feather to their already beplumed headgear with the unveiling of their newest cinema effort to come out of battered Leningrad, which—of all things—is a warm and humorous musical satire of boy-meets-girl entitled, "Spring Song."

Perhaps "Spring Song" is merely a reiteration of the Russian faith in things to come, when the most violent battles will be only those of musicians and music lovers caused by critical opinions. Whatever it is, it is still amazing that such a light-hearted film should come out of Russia at a time like this.

The lighting and photography are a little rusty, true, and the sound track nowhere reaches the heights of perfection which have been developed here; yet the music is delightful and the story content mature, with a most original treatment.

Emphasis on Music

The emphasis which the Red Army, and the people themselves, have put on music as their most dominant form of relaxation and culture are treated in "Spring Song" with a gusty, tongue-in-cheek manner. The deep dark "villain," who keeps the young lovers apart, is no trite "misunderstanding," or its equivalent; it is instead, a riotous battle of musical beliefs between the girl's narrow-minded father, who espouses the cause of chorales and fugues, and the handsome, likable young composer who writes operettas and believes in a well-rounded musical culture.

All this provides ample opportunity for the playing of some melodic tunes by the contemporary composer, Dmitri Kabalevsky, with some added contributions from the works of Bach, Handel and Gounod.

Blonde and dimpled Ludmila Tzelikovskaya brings an engaging voice and buoyant charm to the role of Sima, whose diehard father opposes her love for the young composer Alexei, played by Piotr Kadochnikov. Nikolai Konovalov is the reverent but unrealistic lover of classical music, while Sergei Martinson contributes a comic characterization of the eccentric composer of a "physiological symphony in four spasms."—E. Gossip From Gotham

New York, Feb. 24.

The reason for Lieut. Col. William O'Dwyer's presence at his old office in Kings County concerns indictments which will be announced this week. The indictments will be of a subcontractor for Henry Ford and another from Grand Rapids, who used fictitious and forged invoices to obtain bank loans. Colonel O'Dwyer, on leave from his job as district attorney, unearthed the evidence for the Army . . . The admiral of the Richelieu has been entertaining Free French leaders aboard his battleship here. Two Free French officials will attend the reception for the admiral at City Hall . . . Putzi Hanfstaengl may be returned to Canada, for lack of cooperation.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek will visit New York's Chinatown next Monday, before she's welcomed by LaGuardia that afternoon. She'll make one speech in the South, in addition to her Chicago and Los Angeles speeches, before she goes to England . . . There's been a reorganization at the Office of War Information. William Whitney, Bob Sherwood's aide, who is going overseas, and Edgar Ansel Mowrer have resigned. Whitney will be succeeded in Washington by James Warburg . . . The Capitol Theater will feature vaudeville shows, to compete with the Broadway show places . . . Paul Draper was rejected by the Army, after trying to enlist in the Paratroops.

Elmer Davis is resting in Florida, before inaugurating his new broadcast series . . . Former Ambassador Joe Kennedy denies the published report that he postponed publication of his book at the White House request. "I haven't put pen to paper," he vowed last night. "I have no book" . . . 1500 Nebal Reserve officers, over 45 years old, will soon be placed on the inactive list . . . Bertrand Russell was scheduled to make a broadcast in Philadelphia. Walter Sheldon timed the Russell speech, and then informed him: "Your script is exactly 150 seconds too long." Russell, the famed mathematician, replied: "Oh yes, I see. A minute and a half, eh?"

Leonard Liebling revealed this story last week—of Albert Einstein, who came to the home of Leopold Godowsky and played in a quartette with Jascha Heifetz, Felix Salmond and Mischa Elman. The other three slowed up, at the difficult passages, to permit Einstein to keep pace with them . . . After the scientist had left, the renowned musicians discussed his violin playing. "A great man, that Einstein," said Godowsky. "He can find the answers to space and time. He can find a fourth dimension. He can find the furthermost star in the skies—but he can't find D-flat on a violin."

Some of Justice William O. Douglas' former law students at Yale tell this story about his teaching: They asked the then Professor Douglas a question. "I could give you the correct answer now, but you'd quickly forget it," he replied. "Go to the library and you'll find a textbook which will give you the answer" . . . The students nodded, knowingly. "If you students have an idea that I'm bluffing, that I don't know the answer," Douglas added, "then here's what I'll do. I'll write the correct answer on this paper, seal it in an envelope and give it to you. Then, when you've found the answer in the textbook, open the envelope and check my answer." . . . The suspicious students followed the instructions and discovered that Douglas was right.

Max Gordon, whose movie adaptation of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" lost much money, was asked how he had spent Lincoln's Birthday. "At the Bank of America," replied Gordon, "withdrawing, to pay off that flop" . . . Tommy Corcoran may enter the Army soon . . . Bill Halligan, the movie actor, will try a West Coast revival of "Shuffle Along," with Sissle & Blake and Miller & Lee . . . The man who is suing Kaufman & Hart for plagiarism, alleging that his play about Woollcott predated their "Man Who Came to Dinner," may be sued in turn by Sam Behrman. Behrman's "Brief Moment" of 12 years ago featured such a character, and Woollcott played the role.

Ludwig Bemelmans hopes to return to his native Bavaria after the war is won and govern that occupied territory. "I'm the only one who knows what kind of people they are and how to rule them," says Bemelmans. "I'd kill half of them and give flutes to the other half" . . . The Manhattan ladies who were told that it's a good-luck omen when they touch the red pompoms on the French sailors' caps should have been warned that this also signifies an invitation to be kissed.

Ed Gardner, creator and star of "Duffy's Tavern," was in Haiti some months ago. He hired a troupe of Calypso singers to follow him and sing their improvisations. The Calypsos became fond of him, especially when he invited them to drink with him, and paid them every hour . . . At 3 a. m. a sailor at the bar became antagonistic and selected Gardner as his victim. The Calypsos saw him remove his coat, preparatory to slugging their generous patron. They quickly improvised a tune: "The sailor he now pick a fight with Mr. Gardner who sure is all right; the sailor must be very much boiled, 'cause Mr. Gardner was a lightweight champeen of the world" . . . The sailor heard, halted and ordered: "A drink for my pal, Mr. Gardner."

Georges Schreiber and Joseph Hirsch, the noted artist, have left for Pensacola with Reeves Lewenthal, head of the Association of American Artists, to record in oil the training activities at the naval base there. Elizabethan Comic brilliant young playwright-director-actor, as Justice Greedy in Massenger's "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," now being presented in Catholic University's campus theater to run through March 2

Midget Car 'Roomy'

Hollywood.—John Garfield's midget automobile, a concession to gasoline rationing, isn't exactly roomy. His friends call it downright cramped. Garfield doesn't find it cramped. The Warner Bros. star has been spending most of his days in the tail of a Boeing B-17E Flying Fortress, enacting the role of a gunner in "Air Force." After the bomber, says Garfield, the baby car interior seems like all outdoors.

'A New Way to Pay Old Debts' Opens at C. U.

By Ernest L. Schier

With a familiar guiding hand holding the reins, the Catholic University speech and drama department has managed to salvage a fairly presentable production from its latest effort, this in spite of the havoc wreaked on the campus by the war's manpower demands.

Always partial to Elizabethan drama, this same group, whose past has been studded with more notable theatrical ventures, has chosen from that era of prolific poets a comedy from the pen of Philip Massinger whose title, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," offers a heartening note in the face of such gloomy prospects as the Ides of March (fifteenth) will bring.

One of the many playwrights who flourished shortly after Shakespeare's time, Massinger proves, in this instance, to be a more subtle craftsman than the majority of his contemporaries. His tale of greed and evil outwitted smacks somewhat, in the central character of Sir Giles Overreach, of the Shylock of "The Merchant of Venice," yet the lighter touches of the vehicle denounce any further comparison.

This finer touch of Massinger's is detected more easily in the grace of line and flow of continuity, and even more impressively in the substantial quality of his characters who have no need to stoop to obvious theatrical devices to project themselves, a radical departure, at the time, from the precedent handed down to him.

It is this sophisticated quality of "A New Way to Pay Old Debts" that gives it a clearness and directness which in some plays of this period may be missing. The buffoonery restrained, the dramatic scenes are thus more clearly placed in their proper perspective and given the highlights which are their due.

The story of the play deals with the grasping ways of a sinister extortioner who has brought poverty to his well-born nephew. His insatiable greed knows no end, and when he seeks to marry his daughter against her will to a noble Lord, and wrest the riches from a wealthy widow, he meets his downfall in the form of an organized conspiracy by those involved who fight fire with fire.

This is the substance of the play, relived by its straightforward telling and intelligent development. Unfortunately the play does not fare so well at the hands of the youthful actors as it deserves.

With enthusiasm and energy they bound through their paces, and then, like the ball player who has just knocked the ball out of the park, fall flat on their faces on the homeplate. We refer to the seemingly simple matter of speech, a prerequisite of all who would attain any degree of perfection on the stage.

Too often the lines were indistinguishable, and in many cases badly garbled. This sort of thing is discouraging to any play-goer who hopes to see in the new generation a remedy of the faults of their predecessors.

There are, however, many bright notes to the production. The direction of Father Hartke, for instance, which strives to keep the play moving, pausing only to heighten the tenseness of the dramatic moments. He has also retained, with considerable integrity, the true Elizabethan flavor of the presentation. Then there is a memorable performance by Walter Kerr as Justice Greedy, the magistrate whose stomach prevents him from being more properly judicial.

There are pleasant contributions from Dick Sykes, as the impoverished Wellborn, Louise Fox, who makes a charming Lady Allworth; Margaret Linskie, Sir Giles' daughter; and Art Mullen, Blanche Romer, Margaret Seeley and Vivian Roberts in minor comedy roles.

The important character of Sir Giles Overreach, difficult for even the accomplished artist, was ragged and uneven in the hands of Victor Dial, but considerably redeemed in the final scene where he holds the center of the stage in an impressive death scene.

Prisoners' Kin Are Told How To Mark Mail

The American Red Cross said yesterday that letters may be sent to war prisoners through ordinary mail as soon as the next of kin receive official notice of capture.

There had been scores of inquiries concerning soldiers made captive in the Philippines. Their names recently were forwarded to this country by Japan through the International Red Cross committee.

After the information has been transmitted to the next of kin, the Prisoner of War Information Bureau sends them exact information on how to address the prisoner's mail. To write to those in the Philippines, these instructions should be followed:

For a civilian internee, the second line of the address should read "American Internee held by Japan in the Philippines." Address of the sender should be on the back.

The letters should contain no mention of war, politics, shipping, war production or defense, it was said.

Family Declares 4502 Excess Cans

Philadelphia, Feb. 24 (AP).—A family of three on Philadelphia's main line declared 4502 excess cans of food in its application for War Ration Book No. 2, rationing officials reported today.

All the 72-eight-point coupons of the three books were removed, leaving a total of 4430 eight-pointers to be taken from subsequent ration books.

James Beighle, principal at the school where the family registered, estimated that at the current rate of monthly coupon use, it would take the family more than 41 years to supply the coupons remaining to be deducted.

Sir ThomasBeecham,63 Marries Pianist, 34

New Yoork, Feb. 24 (AP).—Sir Thomas Beecham, 63-year-old British orchestra conductor, and Miss Betty Humby, 34-year-old English pianist, were married here a few days ago, it became known yesterday.

The young pianist has frequently appeared in concerts led by her husband, who is conducting at the Metropolitan Opera this season.

Old U.S.S. Oregon Goes To War Again, as Scrap

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 24 (AP).—The old U. S. S. Oregon started on her way to war again today—this time as scrap metal for more modern weapons.

The famed battleship, pride of Uncle Sam's Navy during the Spanish-American War, lost her 25-ton foremast and other parts of her superstructure as contractors began dismantling operations under a Navy contract.

NLRB Says Ford's Use of Pamphlets Was Not Unfair

The National Labor Relations Board, reversing a trial examiner's findings, has ruled that the Ford Motor Co.'s distribution of allegedly antiunion pamphlets at its Chicago plant in 1937 did not constitute unfair labor practice.

Dismissing a complaint by the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, the board noted that the pamphlets were distributed almost six years ago and since then the company had signed a bargaining contract with the union.

The distribution, the board held, "does not warrant a finding of interference, restraint and coercion" under the National Labor Relations Act and "the trial examiner's finding to the contrary is reversed."

The board upheld the trial examiner in ruling that the dismissal of certain employes at the Chicago plant was not an unfair labor practice.

Referendum Denied

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 24 (AP).—The Arkansas Senate refused by a vote of 6-23 yesterday to refer to the voters a proposed constitutional amendment lowering the voting age from 21 to 18.

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

". . . the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

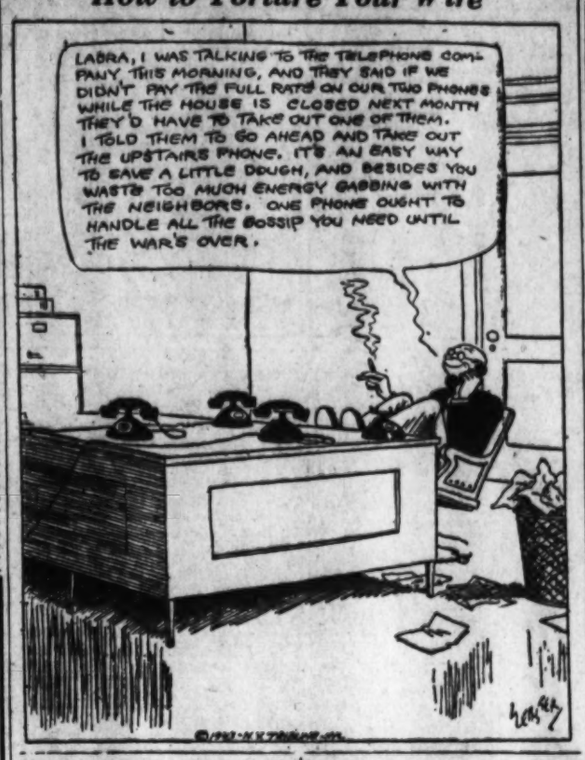
How to Torture Your Wife



LABRA, I WAS TALKING TO THE TELEPHONE COMPANY THIS MORNING, AND THEY SAID IF WE DIDN'T PAY THE FULL RATE ON OUR TWO PHONES WHILE THE HOUSE IS CLOSED NEXT MONTH THEY'D HAVE TO TAKE OUT ONE OF THEM. I TOLD THEM TO GO AHEAD AND TAKE OUT THE UPSTAIRS PHONE. IT'S AN EASY WAY TO SAVE A LITTLE DOUGH, AND BESIDES YOU WASTE TOO MUCH ENERGY GABBING WITH THE NEIGHBORS. ONE PHONE OUGHT TO HANDLE ALL THE BOSSIP YOU NEED UNTIL THE WAR'S OVER.

LOANS TO PAY INCOME TAXES
Income taxes should be paid out of savings or current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15th and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.

Dormitories for 2000 WAVES To Be Ready May 1, Navy Says

Sixteen dormitories to house 2000 enlisted WAVES, now under construction at Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues Northwest, will be completed by the first of May, the Navy Department announced last night.

The quarters, which are being erected partly on American University grounds and partly on the nearby Charles C. Glover estate, will consist of 16 units of the standard two-story dormitory type for WAVES approved by the Navy Department last month. Although the standard dormitory so specified accommodates 230 enlisted personnel, it can be modified to house more or fewer persons, Navy spokesmen said.

In addition to the 2000 enlisted women, there will be 63 staff officers quartered in the new dormitories. All of the WAVES stationed here will be on duty in the vicinity, which includes the university and the WAVE headquarters at the old Mount Vernon Seminary.

Red Cross Buying Is Authorized

Service chairmen of the Silver Spring Red Cross have been authorized to purchase necessary equipment to carry out their projects, Mrs. Walter Arnold, branch chairman, announced yesterday.

Mrs. A. J. Day, production chairman, reported a shipment of 1340 sewed and knitted garments have been sent out of Silver Spring this week.

Welfare Board Seats 2 Today

Two new members of the Board of Public Welfare are to be sworn in today at the District Building, and appointment of a director of public welfare may be expected within a week, Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the welfare board, announced last night.

The two members to take office today are A. Harding Paul, local corporation lawyer, and Mrs. Anita T. Anderson, wife of a Howard University professor.

More than 25 applications have already been received for the position of welfare director to succeed Conrad Van Hyning, whose resignation became effective last week. The board hopes to eliminate by interviews all but the most promising of these applicants, then to send the few best prospects to the District Building for an interview with Guy Mason, the Commissioner responsible for the welfare department, McReynolds said.

After Mason has had an opportunity to judge the qualifications of the applicants, the board hopes to meet with the commissioners and settle upon a nomination in one meeting, said McReynolds. In this way the usual delay of protracted negotiations between the board and the commissioners can be eliminated.

Miss Gay Shepperson, acting head of the department does not want to have the job regularly, and the absence of a permanent director, who can initiate policies and forward pending ones has never been more necessary, McReynolds said.

Stabbed Cabman's Widow Gets $300 From His Buddies

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Weisenberger, 6400 Oakridge Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., wife of the late Arthur Weisenberger, cab driver who was stabbed to death January 30, received a check for $300 representing a collection yesterday from her late husband's associates at the Yellow Cab Co.

The presentation was made by Jesse Given, general manager of the Yellow Cab Co. here, and Mrs. Weisenberger said she planned to buy two $100 war bonds for her two children with part of the money and buy them clothes with the remainder.

Weisenberger was stabbed 21 times on the night of January 30 in the 300 block of New Jersey Avenue Southeast. Police still are seeking his assailant.

Filipino 'Knockout' Aid Seen

By Bob Considine
International News Service Staff Writer

The unconquerable people of a liberated and independent Philippines will join in delivering the knockout blow which the United Nations are preparing for Japan, President Manuel L. Quezon asserted yesterday.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, Quezon told secret Philippine listening posts over the past weekend that the United States is already treating him as the Chief Executive of a completely independent republic.

The Philippines, he reiterated yesterday, "are possessed of the attributes of full nationhood. The only thing lacking is the formal establishment of the Philippine Republic.

That will be forthcoming, he said, as soon as the Japanese are driven out of the islands, even if they are driven out before 1946 when, under the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Act, the commonwealth was automatically to have become a republic.

Quezon urged his embattled countrymen to reject Premier Tojo's recent offer of independence.

"Do not despair for your liberation is certain," he said he told his listening posts. "Don't let the Japanese fool you. Use your wits and beat him at his own game. Above all, you must continue to have faith in America, who has kept faith with every nation, and especially with us."

Arbiter Named In Phone Company Labor Dispute

A mediator was appointed by the United States Conciliation Service yesterday to handle the dispute between the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and 5000 members of the Federation of Telephone Employes of the District over 1943 contract negotiations.

A Federation spokesman said yesterday that the present contract expires April 1, and that the company had been informed last October of the union's desire to open negotiations for new provisions in the new agreement. However he stated, the company took no action upon it until this month, when it demanded an entire restatement of all items.
